FRANCE.

M. Thiers and the Orleans Princes—The Sabbath Law—The Coming Visit of the Assembly to Paris—Proposed Impeachment of Napoleon III.

VERSAILLES, June 14.—The Journal Officiel of today says the story that condemned insurgents have been shot in the Bois de Boulogne with mitrailleuse, is an odious and absurd calumny. It also denies the report that the ORLEANS Princes dined with M. THIERS, and says:

"The Prince DE JOINVILLE and Duc D'AUMALE visited M. THIERS unexpectedly. During the interview, the President said that although he was once a Minister in the Government of their father, King LOUIS PHILIPPE, he was today the head of the Republic. There was nothing significant in the visit of the Princes. They understand the past and accept the present. M. THIERS did himself honor by his bearing during the interview, and the Republicans were unembarrassed in the presence of those noble and illustrious Princes."

The Administration respects the rule forbidding work on Sundays. All the journals approve of the coming visit of the Assembly to Paris, and regard it as the first approach to a genuine reconciliation with the Parisians. The Gaucle publishes a manifesto to the Paris electors against the monarchy, and in favor of the Republic. In order to combat Bonapartist intrigues, the deputies propose to impeach the Emperor for declaring and waging war.

Review of the Army—Rochefort and His Defense—The Finances—Twenty-One Men Executed in the Bois de Boulogne.

LONDON, June 14.—A review of 100,000 soldiers will be held in the Champs de Mars on Sunday next. The troops are leaving La Villette. M. ROCHEFORT is seriously ill, and his trial has been postponed. His defense is that the military tribunal by which he is to be tried is incompetent to pass upon his case. He therefore demands a trial by jury. The Committee of the Assembly upon the Budget is known to be in favor of the raising of funds by means of a loan. The rentes are quoted at 53 francs 33 centimes. The official statement of the Bank of France states the bullion in its vaults at 92,000,000 of francs. A special dispatch to the Standard says twenty-one men were executed yesterday in the Bois de Boulogne.

Protest of Republican Deputies—Communist Trials—Papal Intrigues.

PARIS, June 14.—The Republican manifesto which appeared today is signed by 81 Deputies of the Left in the Assembly. It accuses the Monarchist Deputies of not keeping the agreement made at Bordeaux, whereby it was stipulated that partisan politics should be avoided and charges that the Legitimist members from the provinces are intriguing for the restoration of the monarchy and for intervention in Italy in favor of the Pope. Many of the Communist prisoners were discharged today for want of evidence against them. Arrests are frequent in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Arrondissements. The report that M. PONCADE-LAROQUETTE is a candidate for the Assembly is denied. The Temps remarks that the French bishops are actively moving for the reinstatement of the Pope in his temporal possessions.

Trochu's Defense—The Disorderly Element Abetted by Illustrious Sessions at the Academy Renamed.

PARIS, June 14.—In the Assembly to-day, Gen. TROCHU continued his speech in defense of his administration of military affairs. He gave a minute account of the sorties during the German siege of Paris, and of the reasons for making them. He attributed their defeat to the fact that the Germans used their artillery only. The French, he believed, would have beaten the German infantry if they could have engaged them. His main plan had been for a grand sortie toward Rouen, but, after the victory of Coulmiers, public opinion demanded a junction of the garrison of Paris with the army of the Loire, which was sheer madness. One of the greatest obstacles to the conduct of the defense was the disorderly element in Paris, which was instigated to rebel by BISMARCK, and to this end was furnished with arms from the enemy outside the city. He stigmatized the commencement of the bombardment by the Germans without formal notice as an unparalleled violation of the rules of civilized warfare. The French Academy resumed its sittings today.

THE WASHINGTON TREATY.

The London Times on the Subject—International Fellowship—Instructions to American Agents.

LONDON, June 14.—The Times, in an editorial today, says of the Treaty of Washington that it was not England alone who yielded some of her claims. The United States also made great concessions. The Times considers it unprecedented that such a grave difference between nations as that of the Alabama claims should have been settled without a resort to arms. The demand for consequential damages for the injury done to American commerce by the Alabama and Kindred vessels was unacceptable to the English Commissioners, and was abandoned by the United States. The Times, in conclusion, expresses the hope that, taking pattern from the adjustment of the American question, the nations of Europe will rise to a higher conception of the aims and duties of international fellowship. Earl DE GREY AND RIPON is to be created Marquis of RIPON in recognition of his distinguished services in connection with the Treaty of Washington.

BERLIN, June 14.—It is said that the American Envoys on the Continent have received instructions to ascertain the possibility of arriving at an agreement between the great Powers with reference to the protection of private property at sea in time of war.

GERMANY.

Compensation for the Results of the War—Branches of the Bank of Prussia in Alsace and Lorraine—Prerogatives—Congratulations to the Pope.

BERLIN, June 14.—The Committee in charge of the Dotation bill met today, and was addressed by Prince BISMARCK on the subject of its labors. The bill was then adopted, with an amendment, under which the Emperor will distribute 4,000,000 of thalers among the Generals and statesmen who have achieved the results of the war. The Parliament has unanimously sanctioned the grants made by the Crown to the relatives of the members of the Reserves and Landwehr who fell during the war. The Bank of Prussia has been authorized to establish branches in Alsace and Lorraine. The Emperor WILLIAM has congratulated the Pope upon the occurrence of his jubilee. The prorogation of Parliament will probably take place on Thursday afternoon.

IOWA.

The State Democratic Convention—Adoption of Resolutions and Nomination of Candidates.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 14.—The Democratic State Convention met in this city, at 11 o'clock this morning. The attendance was the largest the party has ever had in the State, fifty of the 104 counties being represented. A permanent organization was effected by the election of B. F. MONTGOMERY, Chairman, and W. W. GARNER and T. O. WALKER, Secretaries. Upon the announcement of the various committees the old democracy made a fight against the packed programme of the faction in favor of the new departure and were beaten 3 to 1. A lengthy debate followed on the manner in which the Committee on Resolutions were appointed. Judge CLAGETT moving that the Committee be enlarged. This was finally tabled by a vote of 182 to 84, which is considered a victory for the New Departure. The Convention then took a recess.

On reassembling, Hon. A. C. DODGE, from the Committee on Resolutions, made a unanimous report:

Resolved, That we recognize no binding obligation to the Constitution of the United States as it now exists, without reference to the means by which the same became the supreme law of the land.

Resolved, That we will faithfully support the Constitution of the United States as it now exists, and that we demand for it a strict Constitution, so as to protect equally the rights of States and individuals in the union, and to the federal system of State and Local Governments, and that we will forever defend the same against centralized Federal power.

Resolved, That universal suffrage, having been established, should now be coupled with its twin measure, universal amnesty.

Resolved, That we denounce all riotous combinations, conspiracies against the law, and demand that the same be suppressed by the proper authorities, and that the Federal power ought not to intervene unless such intervention is demanded by the State authorities.

Resolved, That the proposed annexation of the Dominican Republic meets with our earnest opposition, partly on account of the character of its mongrel population and of their unfitness to become American citizens, but more especially on account of the corrupt motives in which that measure had its inception, and of the reprehensible means by which it was sought to be consummated.

Resolved, That while we have a tariff on imports it must be regulated with an eye single to revenue, and not with a view to what is called protection, which is only another name for the legalized plundering of one industry for the benefit of favors upon another, and that the present election to the United States Senate by the Legislature of Iowa of a man who is openly committed to a proposition to fasten upon the Government that party in power so antagonistic to the great agricultural interests of the State.

Resolved, That the profligate corruption and wanton extravagance which pervades every Department of the Federal Government, the sacrifice of the interest of the laborer to aggrandize a handful of aristocrats, the wicked deprivation of the people of their rightful heritage in public lands which have been made a gift to railroad and other monopolists, the payment of more than $700,000,000 coin bonds during the administration of President GRANT, on the Government-bonds, payable as per, the maintenance at an annual cost to the people of nearly $30,000,000 of an unconstitutional, oppressive and exorbitant system of banking, whereby the many are made the slaves and fatness the few, are abuses which call for wise and thorough remedies.

Resolved, That we are in favor of strict economy of the large reduction of the expenditures of the Federal and State Governments; of the civil service reform; of the collection of the internal revenue by the State authorities; the return to honest labor the myriads of tax-gatherers who infest our land and eat up its substance, and the speedy trial, conviction and punishment of thieves who have stolen taxes paid by the people.

Resolved, That we regret the loss of reputation of the national debt and believe it to be the duty of the Government to pay, according to law and in lawful money all its liabilities.

Resolved, That it is a flagrant outrage on the rights of the free laborers and mechanics of Iowa, that the labor of Penitentiary convicts should be brought into competition with theirs, and that it is the duty of the next Legislature to enact such laws as will certainly and effectually protect them from such unjust and ruinous competition.

Resolved, That Section 2, Article 5, of the Constitution of Iowa, which declares that property of all corporations for pecuniary profit shall be subject to taxation, the same as that of individuals, shall be rigidly and strictly enforced, and that by virtue thereof we demand that railroads and railroad property shall be taxed just as the property of a farmer and mechanic are taxed, and we affirm the right of the people, by legislative enactment, to regulate and control all corporations doing business within the borders of the State.

Resolved, That with the watch-word of reform we confidently go to the country, that we believe the interests of the great body of the people are the same, that without regard to the past political associations they are friends to free government, that they are equally honest, brave and patriotic, and we appeal to them as to our brothers and countrymen to aid us to obtain relief from grievous abuses which wrong and oppress every one except the wrong-doers and oppressors themselves.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously without debate.

The following candidates were nominated:

For Governor—J. C. KNAPP, of Van Buren County.

For Lieutenant-Governor—M. M. HALL, of Dubuque.

For Superintendent of Public Instructions—E. M. MUNN, of Lee.

For Supreme Judge—JOHN T. DUNCOMB, of Webster.

THE COAL MINES.

Present State of Affairs in the Lehigh Region.

The Miners Indisposed to Work Unless an Advance on the February Rates is Offered—All Quiet Along the Line.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., June 14.—The following special has been received here:

HAZELTON, June 14.—The coal miners in this region have not yet resumed work, and from all appearance will not for some time. There are eight men at work at Upper Lehigh, and about fifty cars of coal were shipped from there today. There is also one man at work at Audenried; he is guarded night and day by policemen. There was a region meeting, composed of delegates from each district of the Workingmen's Benevolent Association, in the Lehigh region, and resolutions were passed giving the men permission to go to work at an advance of five per cent. on the offer made by the operators on the 24th of February, which is as follows: When coal is $5 per ton at Elizabethport or Port Johnson, $14 per week for miner's day work; $12 for inside laborer; $10 50 per week for outside laborer, and fifty cents a ton for cutting coal. These are the prices paid by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company at Summit Hill and Newport, and by the Wilkesbarre Coal and Iron Company at Wilkesbarre. The operators say they will not make any advance on the above offer, and the men will not go to work at prices named all Summer. They say there was a time when a compromise should have been made, but the men would not accept it, and now that the market is well supplied the operators are unwilling to make any advance upon their February offer. Everything is quiet and orderly, and no disturbances of any kind have occurred nor are anticipated.

WASHINGTON.

Sentence of the Colored Cadet Commuted from Dismissal to Reduction in Academic Grade—Steam-boat Inspection—Slogan in Pursuit of Knowledge—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—The finding of the general Court-martial in the case of Cadet SMITH, at West Point, was dismissed from the Academy, and it was approved by the Secretary of War, but, as will be seen from the following order, the President has commuted it to reduction in his Academic grade for the year:

Before a General Court-martial, which convened at West Point, N. Y., Jan. 6, 1871, pursuant to special order No. 285, War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, Dec. 31, 1870, and of which Capt. ALEX. PIPER, Third United States Artillery, is President, was arraigned and tried Cadet JAMES W. SMITH, United States Military Academy, (charge, conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman,) to which charge and specifications the accused, Cadet JAMES W. SMITH, United States Military Academy, pleaded not guilty. Finding—The Court, having maturely considered the evidence adduced, finds the accused, Cadet JAMES W. SMITH, United States Military Academy, as follows: Of the first specification, guilty; of the second specification, guilty; of the third specification, guilty; of the charge, guilty. Sentence—And the Court does therefore sentence him, Cadet JAS. W. SMITH, of the United States Military Academy, to be dismissed the service of the United States. In conformity with the sixty-fifth of the rules and articles of war, the proceeding of the General Court-martial in the foregoing case have been forwarded to the Secretary of War for the action of the President of the United States. The proceedings, findings and sentence are approved, but in view of the circumstances surrounding this case, and believing that the ends of public justice will be better subserved, and the policy of the Government, of which the presence of this cadet in the Military Academy is a signal illustration, be better maintained by a commutation of the sentence than by its rigid enforcement, the President is pleased to mitigate it by substituting for dismissal from the service of the United States, reduction in his Academic standing one year. Cadet SMITH will join the succeeding fourth class at the commencement of the next Academic year. The sentence, as commuted, will be duly executed.

W. W. BELKNAP,
JUNE 13, 1871. Secretary of War.

STEAM-BOAT INSPECTORS.

The Board of Supervising Inspectors of Steamboats, now in session in this city, at the Ebbitt House, devoted today to the exhibition by inventors of a large variety of instruments, attachments and apparatus called for under the new act relating to steam vessels. Among the inventions exhibited today was a great variety of fog alarms, life-preservers, life-rafts, steam registers and gauges; steam pumps, low-water alarm indicators, sediment agitators, apparatus for lowering, hoisting and detaching boats at sea, surface condenser, fire extinguishers, safety valves, metallic life-boats and others. During the examination of the fog alarms in the gentlemen's parlor of the hotel, it seemed as if pandemonium was let loose, such was the howl of whistles and horns. The members of the Board are all present, Gen. JOSEPH BELKNAP, Supervising Inspector-General, presiding. First District, SAMUEL GUTHRIE, San Francisco, Cal.; Second, ADDISON LOW, New-York City; Third, JOHN MENSHAW, Baltimore, Md.; Fourth, FRANK BURNETT, St. Louis, Mo.; Fifth, CHAS. L. STEPHENSON, Galena, Ill.; Sixth, SAMUEL HOUSTON, Louisville, Ky.; Seventh, JNO. S. DEVENEY, Pittsburg, Penn.; Eighth, PETER J. RALPH, Detroit, Mich.; Ninth, ASAPH S. BEMIS, Buffalo, N. Y.; Tenth, WM. ROGERS, New-Orleans, La.

THE JAPANESE EMBASSY.

The Japanese Ambassador, with two Japanese students and Mr. POOLE, a member of the new Japanese Commission, spent a long time today looking through the model-room of the Patent Office, and they are collecting a great deal of information, especially in regard to agricultural implements. They will send home several sets of drawings, specifications and models which seem to them likely to be useful, and a full set of the reports of the office. They seem to take more interest in the Patent Office than in any other of the departments or Government offices. A commission is in process of formation, to be made up of American gentlemen, it is understood, which will visit Japan, to assist in carrying out the enterprises of which ideas have been received here and in Europe. The Commission is employed by the Government of Japan. Little, however, is made public regarding the Commission or its purpose, and the names of no others of its members than that of Mr. POOLE are announced. He is now engaged in collecting information for the Japanese here. They are studying everything, and every facility is accorded by the United States officials, as it is deemed of the highest importance to stimulate friendly relations with Japan and assist in building up its commerce and trade, which must inevitably fall into our hands.

CANCELLING MACHINES.

A paragraph has been extensively circulated which states that the Internal Revenue Office has ordered a different cancelling machine from the one heretofore used for the cancellation of revenue stamps. The order never issued from the Revenue Office, but the report was probably made by the patentee of a machine who has been trying to secure its adoption by the Government.

One of the most encouraging signs of life and energy on the part of the new Louisiana of the District of Columbia was the introduction, today, with a prospect of speedy passage, by Councillor J. W. THOMPSON, of a comprehensive bill providing the ways and means for, and directing the manner in which an additional supply of water, to the extent of 16,000,000 gallons per diem, shall be brought into the city from the grand aqueduct which the Government has built, at a cost of $6,000,000. At present the residents in the higher parts of the city have no water save at night, and very little then.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

LAKE COASTING TRADE.

The appointment of JOHN FRENCH, JR., as an Inspector in the New-York Custom-house, has been confirmed by Secretary BOUTWELL. The Secretary of the Treasury authorizes the Surveyor of Customs at Duluth to enroll and license vessels to be employed in the foreign and coasting trade on the lakes on the northern frontiers, the power being limited to vessels being owned at Duluth, and to the issuing of temporary enrollments to other vessels when it may become necessary to do so.

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES.

The Ku-klux Committee, today, examined the United States District-Attorney of South Carolina, and also an Ex-Auditor of that State. These witnesses give us rather gloomy accounts of affairs in South Carolina. Judge BUSTARD, of Alabama, now here, has been summoned before the Committee. Numerous summonses have been sent to witnesses designated by the Democratic members of the Committee. Gov. LINDSAY, of Alabama, was not examined today, but probably will be on Friday. He utterly denounces the testimony of Rev. A. S. LAKIN, given yesterday, whom he characterizes as a stirrer up of strife. He says one proof of the falsity of LAKIN'S statement is that he is still living in the very section of which he spoke as being lawless. The Governor also lives there, and represents that Alabama is thoroughly peaceful.

HOMŒOPATHY IN PENSION BUREAU.

The Commissioner of Pensions has addressed the following letter to the Medical Referee of the Pension Bureau, in reference to the recent removal of a homœopathic physician from the position of Examining Pension Surgeon:

SIR: In the matter of the removal of Dr. STILLMAN SPOONER, of Oneida, Madison County, New-York, it appears that he is a regular graduate of the particular school in which he claims to practice, and that he is possessed of capacity, fitness, and of honorable record in the profession. It not having been charged that he is wanting in any of these requisites, and there being no charge against him other than that he is a practitioner in a particular school of medicine, he is hereby restored to the position as Examining Surgeon. This action has the concurrence of the honorable Secretary of the Interior.

Very respectfully,
JAMES H. BAKER, Commissioner.

The removal above referred to was made by Commissioner VANDERMAN.

A HIGH-HANDED OFFICIAL.

This afternoon Capt. L. M. DAVENPORT, a clerk in the Treasury Department, entered the office of Justice of the Peace WALL, a colored man, and fired two shots from a revolver at him. One of the balls seriously wounded WALL in the abdomen. The latter had called on DAVENPORT at the Department at the instance of a woman who represented that Capt. DAVENPORT sold her a worthless stove, the object being the return of the article and the recovery of the money. Capt. DAVENPORT has been arrested.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Inauguration of Gov. Weston—Gov. Stearn's Valedictory and Weston's Message.

CONCORD, N. H., June 14.—The gala day of the New-Hampshire Democracy commenced at sunrise. A salute of thirty-four rounds, fired with one cannon, aroused the Democracy and everybody else. The country people pour into town from all quarters, and up to 11 o'clock ninety car-loads had arrived. The idea of barbecuing one of FRANK JONES' fat oxen was abandoned. Though the ox is the largest in the State, a pair of them weighing 4,500 pounds, they were freely offered by the generous "Gambrinus" of Portsmouth. The special train of twenty-five cars over the Concord Road, arrived at 11 o'clock A. M., in charge of Gen. DONAHOE, bringing the Governor elect, the Amoskeag Veterans, Gen. HEAD, commander, the Head Guards, and a volunteer military organization of Manchester, known as the Sheridan Guards, and a large number of others. The arrival was greeted by a salute of guns. Gov. WESTON was received at the depot by Gov. STEARNS, and other distinguished persons. The Legislature, having met, took a recess, and proceeded in a body to the depot, where a procession formed, and escorted the Governor elect to the Capitol.

Gov. STEARNS then delivered his valedictory address in which he gave a favorable account of the material interests of the State. The debt is $3,360,000, on which the interest does not exceed six per cent., with an annual reduction of six per cent. of the debt. The tax of one per cent. exacted from the receipts of foreign insurance companies has realized to the Treasury nearly $15,000 in the last twenty months. In conclusion Gov. STEARNS expresses the hope that under the blessing of Divine Providence, the industry, intelligence and virtue of our people will continue to increase, and that through the influence of our religious and educational institutions, we may perpetuate the love of freedom.

Gov. WESTON was then sworn into office, and read his message. He dwelt principally on the local indebtedness of the State. He advocates the reduction of taxation, and that a tax equivalent to paying the interest on the State debt, and $100,000 per annum of the principal, be levied. He therefore suggests that laws be enacted calculated to liquidate the State debt within a certain number of years. He also thinks the State should assume the payment of the indebtedness of certain towns which now are overtaxed. He dwells somewhat upon the slow development of the State, which he thinks has a tendency to retrograde in population. To meet this difficulty he advocates a greater utilization of the numerous water-powers, holding that the State should extend every facility for the building of mills and factories. He touches the school question, which he claims needs attention, the public schools not being up to the standard they should be. On the subject of Federal Government he is very brief, but he is decidedly opposed to granting land to railroad companies, to overawing one class of our citizens with military force, and excepting the bondholders from taxation. Finally, he thinks the Democratic triumph in the State is a wise and beneficial one to the people—not a personal affair merely—but the occasion of the triumph of great principles.

After the delivery of the message, the Legislature, not being in a working condition, adjourned till 10 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.

Gov. WESTON and Mrs. WESTON held a reception at the Eagle Hotel from 9 to 10 o'clock this evening. It looks now as if the question of contested membership would be settled by the withdrawal of two members from Manchester and NATHAN WHIPPLE, (Rep.) from Lisbon. With these changes, Democrats feel confident of a working majority.

The Christian Moral Science Congress.

PHILADELPHIA, June 14.—In the Christian Moral Science Congress, in session here today, Rev. Dr. COCKER made a statement of accounts. He had already received about $2,000, and God had enabled the Society to keep clear of debt. Three-fifths of the members were clergymen. Nearly $2,000 had been subscribed. He thought $15,000 yearly would be necessary; and if less than this is aimed at, it would not work on a scale commensurate with the importance of the Society. Three hundred members had been enrolled, and 400 others had given pledges to join. Committees were appointed to select permanent officers and to audit accounts. The Congress then adjourned.

CUBA.

Surrender of Insurgent Leaders—Mass Insubordination by the Volunteers.

HAVANA, June 14.—A number of families have surrendered at Santo Espiritus, including seventy men, within the past few days. Letters from prominent parties announce also the early surrender of several prominent insurgent leaders. Certain proceedings and letters state positively that BENNETT left without any official character or mission. VALMASEDA goes to Puerto Principe on the 17th of June. Four of the battalions of Havana volunteers refuse to send a company each to the military line. The other battalions have already designated the companies to go by lot.

The Henry Verdict Against Jay Gould.

PROVIDENCE, June 14.—In the Supreme Court of this State, now in session in Newport, the jury yesterday returned a verdict for the plaintiffs for the sum of $40,660 36, in the case of A. G. FARWELL & Co. against JAY GOULD. The suit was on a note, and the writ was served on him by the Sheriff last Summer, during his residence in Newport. The defendant contended that the note, for which he was sued as an indorser, should have been indorsed by him as President of the Erie Railroad Company, but he had inadvertently omitted to do so; that in fact it was a note from that Company to the Hartford and Erie Railroad Company, and as he had brought a bill in equity against the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad Company and other parties, he asked for a continuance. The motion for continuance was urged by Mr. SHEFFIELD as counsel for JAY GOULD, and also by Gen. VAN ZANDT as counsel for the Hartford and Erie Railroad Company, who, the latter said, were the real defendants in the case, while Mr. GOULD was only nominally in that position. Messrs. TILLINGHAST and CARPENTER, of Providence, appeared for FARWELL & Co., the present holders of the note, and pressed for trial at the present time. The Court denied the motion for continuance, and the jury was called and impaneled. After the opening of the case to the jury by the plaintiff's attorney, the defendant submitted judgment, and a verdict was accordingly rendered in favor of the plaintiffs, as above stated.

Connecticut Republican Legislative Caucus.

HARTFORD, Conn., June 14.—The Republican Legislative caucus to-night renominated Judges PARDEE and PHELPS for Supreme Court Judgeships; AMOS L. TREAT and ASA A. WOODWARD were the unsuccessful candidates. JAS. PIKE, of Sterling, was renominated for Railroad Commissioner for three years, receiving on decisive ballot 51 votes to 49 for JOHN E. SHERMAN, of Norfolk. Nominations for State Prison Directors: Hon. O. STORRS, COLTON and M. D. F. SMITH, of Goshen.

JEROME PARK.

Racing for the Third Day of the Race—Picking Out the Winners.

Today, if the weather is fine, there will be a continuation of the fine racing at Jerome Park, and five good contests are with Lord LORNE was proposed, "curses both loud and deep were heaped upon them as callous despoilers of the poor." "The rattle of the royal begging-box," "able-bodied paupers," "royal leeches," "royal sponsers," were the mildest terms of contempt employed on the subject. It was a work-shop joke that his Lordship should be set up as a green grocer or taught some handicraft to enable him to earn an honest living for himself and his wife without coming on the public. The questions passed from mouth to mouth, "Why should we, who can scarcely find bread for ourselves, be forced to contribute, in however small a degree, to the sumptuous maintenance of others whom we have never seen, and who are not doing and have never done us or the State any service?" Now, then, the inquiry was pushed still further. "Why should we be forced to contribute to the support of royalty at all?" I do not doubt that this is a correct version of the kind of language which was held by working men; but I still adhere to my opinion that though this is a sign of discontent with monarchy, it does not prove an inclination to republicanism. On the contrary, I believe it points quite the other way. People are beginning to grudge the expense of monarchy, because, as far as the English monarchy is concerned—they do not get enough or it for their money; they seek a more substantial or more apparent royalty than a shy Queen who lives secluded among the Highland hills or at her seaside house for the greater part of the year, and is rarely visible to the multitude. Whether, if they had more royalty, they would find it come up to their ideal, is another question, which the next reign may not answer very satisfactorily. A Queen who is seen too little may be better than a King seen too much, if the sight is not to his public taste.

COMMUNISTS AND FENIANS.

It turns out that Gen. CLUSERET, who has lately been a prime agent of mischief in France, was an active leader among English Fenians a year or two since. He is not an American by birth as was supposed, but an Irishman. He was educated for a priest, but being in Italy at the time of the Garibaldian expedition, his wild, adventurous spirit led him to cast off his cloak and join the "Reds" with whom he has ever since been more or less in alliance. It was he who planned the abortive attack on Chester Castle. He was arrested at the time under a feigned name. Nothing could be proved against him, so he was released. In 1848 the wave of revolutionary disturbance which spread over the Continent did not fail to reach our shores, but though it caused some agitation and alarm it had no serious results. There is again some apprehension that the energies of the International Association, finding no further scope in France for the present, may be directed upon England.

THE TICHBORNE TRIAL.

This great trial promises to last some weeks yet. The claimant has been in the box for four days, three days under examination by his own counsel, when, of course, he went on smoothly enough, and yesterday, under cross-examination by the Solicitor-General, who is leading counsel for the defendant. The Solicitor gave him fair warning that he should be as disagreeable as he could, and has not disappointed him in that respect. He complained that the Solicitor's conduct was very insolent. "I mean it so," replied the lawyer, who certainly succeeded in confusing his victim and driving him into a corner, so that he could only say he would not answer for any dates, and that he could not swear to what he could not remember, and that he thought it a shame he should be pressed on certain points, and so on. "I am in a state of confusion," he said. "My counsel put his question in one way and you put it in another." He pronounced his mother's name HENRIETTA FELICITE, and when some one whispered Felicité, the Chief Justice, catching the sound, threatened if he could discover the prompter to send him to prison for contempt of Court. The case for the defendant is that the claimant is a Wapping butcher, and he confessed that the first day he arrived in England he went to Warpine, which he had not mentioned in his examination in chief.

AFFAIRS IN GERMANY.

The New France-German Frontier—Teachings of the War—Bronze versus Cast-Steel—Shippers and Their Compensation for War-Losses—Aid for Impoverished Landwehrmen—"Penal Exchanges" and Their Results.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BERLIN, Saturday, May 27, 1871.

The change in the Franco-German frontier has returned a population of 34,600 souls to France. The district comprises the Canton Germagney and part of the Cantons Belfort, Delle, Fontaine, Dannemkirch, and Massmünster. It turns out that the new frontier constitutes a far more appropriate border-line than the old, as it not only divides the French-speaking from the German-speaking population, but runs along a ridge of heights forming a natural frontier and separating the waters on either side. The district, near Thionville, claimed in addition to former cessions by the Germans, contains no more than 1,000 inhabitants. The annexation of Alsace made the drawing of a border-line between that province and Switzerland indispensable for the collection of Customs, the tariff having by the change of nationality likewise undergone a change. This was done not a moment too soon, for commercial enterprise, availing itself of every opportunity, had already utilized the interregnum. A great business was done in sugar from Germany to Alsace via Switzerland, a drawback of five thalers being allowed to exporters for every hundred-weight exported to Switzerland, while the duty on its passing the Alsato-Swiss frontier amounted to no more than forty-five or fifty centimes per kilo. The Badenese Customs office on the frontier have thus had to pay for more than they received, and some Alsatian and Badenese firms are said to have realized enormous profits. With regard to the compensation for Alsatian railway lines, and the discrepancies in the valuation, on which I commented in my last letter, I hear now that the Germans have made great deductions on the ground that the first fifteen years for which the lines had been guaranteed, and after which the French Government had reserved to itself the right of redemption, have come to an end in November last, so that more Government pressure could be exercised on the companies. The French claim of eight hundred millions may fairly have represented the actual capital value of the lines, but the Government was free to demand their retrocession at the lower terms.

BRONZE VERSUS CAST-STEEL GUNS.

Among the lessons taught the German military authorities by the experiences of the late war, there is one applying to the arming of the artillery. Before the war the Prussians would swear by nothing but the famous cast-steel Krupps, which were intended to become as distinguishing a specialty of the Prussian artillery as the needle-gun had been made of the infantry. Bronze was as good as given up altogether as a gun-metal. We do not yet officially learn where and how the cast-steels have failed, but it is a fact that bronze is again to form the staple material for the gun-foundries. Cheapness is assigned as the main reason, and we may be sure that the authorities will not sacrifice efficiency to economy. Cast-steel guns are exceedingly costly. All the reserve guns cast during the war have been made of bronze, and have answered admirably. The two principal artillery weapons of the Prussian Army—the rifled four-pounders, or, as they are to be called henceforth, eight-centimetres guns, and the short twenty-four pounders, which made so great a mark in the war, and with panegyrics of which the official papers have been teeming—are to be bronze, and so is a new arm, the twenty-one-centimetres mortars, throwing a shell of 160 pounds, with seven and a half Kilos of gunpowder inside and two kilos for projection. The long twenty-four pounders are still to be made of cast-steel. The old-fashioned grenades and shrapnel shells are likewise to come into use again, after having been altogether abandoned for some time before the war.

*None have been used in the late campaign, but artillery officers have pronounced in favor of them.

SHIPPERS AND WAR COMPENSATION.

The terms of compensation for captured vessels and cargoes, as proposed by the Federal Council, and reported by me at the time, by no means satisfy the persons to whom they chiefly apply. The principal maritime cities have appointed delegates to consider them, and consult on the course to be adopted, with a view to obtaining juster terms, and these Deputies have met some days ago and are now sitting at Berlin. The Government proposals are hardly liberal, which appears the more unjustifiable as the various States have set aside a large portion of the indemnity to divide among themselves as a State treasure. The Bremer Handelsblatt considers the effects of the war upon German transmarine commerce most disastrous, and condemns the illiberal terms of compensation, as giving the death-blow to German shipping. It affirms numerous shipping firms to be selling their vessels and dismissing their Captains. I am not prepared to say if the gloomy prognostications of the paper are well founded, but being a mercantile organ in one of the leading maritime mercantile cities, it ought to be well informed. The new order of things has likewise given offense to the inhabitants of fortified cities. Military absolutism and civil liberty will hardly go together, and as the military rules are to be made more severe, the civilian population cannot but suffer. Willing submission to martinet law is not to be expected by cities mercantile as well as military, so there is a delegation of representatives of Cologne, Strasund, Danzic, Ulm, &c., to consult here to offer combined resistance.

ASSISTANCE TO IMPOVERISHED LANDWEHRMEN.

The attention of the German Parliament is just at present absorbed by two motions before the House, the one emanating from Chevalier DE BUNSEN, and the other from Deputy VOLK. The former demands that assistance should be afforded to such of the landwehr and reserves as have suffered severe loss by military service away from home. The new Military Pensions law deals liberally with wounded and disabled soldiers, as also with widows and orphans of the killed, but overlooks entirely the thousands and tens of thousands taken from their farms or business to fight for their country, who returned with sound limbs, but only to find their families half starved or their business impaired, sometimes ruined. No case can be stronger than that of these poor people, and their losses are not to be denied even by their adversaries. They amount in many instances to absolute ruin. Nobody could have a stronger claim upon the community. Compensation is out of the question, even donations are not demanded; but it is proposed that State loans should be allowed to assist the losers in re-establishing business. Their cause was ably advocated by M. von BUNSEN and supported by the entire Liberal side of the House, but M. VON DELBRUCK verbally, and M. VON BISMARCK by letter, have both refused to do anything for the poor people, purely on account of difficulties acknowledged to be merely technical, purely because the investigation of the claims would occasion too much trouble!

PENAL EXCHANGE OF TWO POST-OFFICE CLERKS.

The other matter refers to the exchange of two Post-office clerks at Hamburg, who have been exchanged to out-of-the-way places on the Russian frontier for petitioning Parliament for justice in a disciplinary case. Both men are admitted by their superiors to be well-conducted, well-working officials. German officials are liable to be exchanged to any town east of France and west of Russia, and bound in such a case to pay their own travelling expenses, &c. This right of Government affords an easy mode of punishing men not to be got at by law, and this kind of exchanges has thus become known by the name of "penal exchanges." Collective petitions to Government, being too closely approaching the forms of demonstrations, are prohibited, whereas the law universally allows petitions to Parliament. The two clerks had therefore no other way but to petition the latter as a hope of obtaining redress. It appears from the Postmaster-General's decree, lately published, that they were threatened beforehand with an exchange for doing so. Persisting in their course, they were packed off to small places in the backwoods of Prussia, into which the civilization even of the eighteenth century has not yet penetrated. Being questioned on the subject, M. VON DELBRUCK, chief of the Federal Council, distinctly denied the penal character of the exchange, which was, however, as distinctly confirmed by the Post-master-General's rescript, published immediately after. So one of the two officials has been caught in a flagrant untruth. The matter has created a deal of bad blood and discontented the Liberal, or even Constitutional party. We are looking forward to a new discussion of the subject after Whitsuntide, on a motion announced by M. VOLK, which promises to introduce a little life into the debates, but also to destroy the harmony which has hitherto united Government and the Liberals.

THE COMMUNE'S AGONY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Saturday, May 27, 1871.

Everywhere the insurgents have been steadily repulsed. They have lost heart, and in spite of credulity in assurances of some of their high priests, there is a vague suspicion of treachery. One member of the Commune has been executed at the foot of the statue of HENRI IV., and his body tossed into the Seine over the parapet of the Pont Neuf. His pockets on being searched proved that he had been employed in feathering his nest. It was not until Tuesday that Belleville would believe that the troops of the Assembly had entered Paris. There was then no room for doubt; the guns of Montmartre opened on the heart of the insurrection, and Col. RAZOUA, the Ex-Spahis, galloped up, ordered barricades and a powder-magazine in the grocer's cellar at the corner of the street. Then Belleville stood aghast, and an old maid is reported to have lost her reason and finally to have dashed out her brains by leaping out of a top window. The state of Belleville was feverish in the extreme—much debility and great excitement of a nervously irritable character. A great many men omitted to answer "present" when the rolls were called, and in order to fan the expiring flame a dozen priests and a few gendarmes were paraded through the quarter and then shot in the Rue Haxo. The artillery-men had a gratification of sixty francs apiece handed over to them for having kindled several conflagrations. "That's the way the people revenge themselves," cried the insurgents on the heights as they viewed the flames devouring the palaces and stores beneath them. Battalions which had been driven from other quarters flocked into the north-west corner of the capital, where a desperate stand is to be made, and the rebels to conquer or bury themselves under the ruins of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Arrondissements. The sailors have been doing good service with the small field-pieces which they drag labont with them. They get a piece into a doorway, load and train it to the proper height, then wheel it rapidly into the street, fire and jump back under cover, leaving the gun to come in with the recoil. In this way several barricades have been knocked to pieces by the naval brigade.

JOURNALISTS' TROUBLES.

Today one could walk up the boulevards to a certain point, beyond which it was dangerous, and not permitted to pass. To get newspapers one had to venture within range. Sat down later at a café to take a cup of coffee and run my eye over the Constitution. Editor passed by and declared that he was setting up the paper when a shell fell into the type-boxes, but fortunately did not explode or he had never lived to tell the tale, supposing the tale to be true, which I doubt. Requests me to mention the fact in order that New-York may know under what difficulties he produced his sheet on Tuesday morning. Have no milk in my coffee, and editor thinks this deplorable state of things will last for a week longer. I thought myself wrong during the siege, but am mistaken. Have a shandy of mouse now a butcher this morning dealing out horse, mule and donkey. In the poorer districts, when a horse falls, the inhabitants pounce on the unfortunate animal like so many wolves and pick it to the bone before it has time to stiffen.

WARFARE FROM WINDOWS.

Firing on the troops from windows is now the order of the day; a number of women have been found guilty of this crime and executed without mercy. I regret to say, too, that several vivandieres have been shot for no other crime than that of having donned the uniform of the Commune and administered to the creature comforts of the insurgents. Surely these military ladies might have been more leniently dealt with. Four were shot this morning, and after the execution I picked up a little rosette which had adorned the bosom of one of the victims. Women found with petroleum are instantly disposed of.

PROGRESS OF THE FIGHTING.

Today the rain falls heavily. The struggle is coming to an end. L'AMIRAULT, VINOY, DU CROISY and CLINCHANT are closing round the prey. The bounds of the wounded panther are becoming more and more circumscribed. The Place du Châtean d'Eau fell yesterday, after some sharp fighting. At the last moment it had been powerfully fortified, and to its rear lies Belleville. Its capture was therefore of great importance. The Bastile was also taken, but the troops of the line suffered heavily at the surrounding barricades, especially at the one in front of the Beaumarchais Theatre, where nearly five hundred officers and men lost their lives. At Père la Chaise, where the sharp-shooters on both sides sheltered themselves behind the tombs, the fighting is said to have been long and obstinate, but it seemed to me that the principal struggle was more to the right. The regulars, after some little time, managed to turn the cemetery and seize on the upper ground, which, of course, determined the retreat of the insurgents, who fled into Menil Nustant. It is supposed that the rebel force cannot number above ten thousand men at the present moment. Over thirty thousand insurgents have been killed or taken prisoners since the commencement of the struggle, and a large number of men who never really cared for the Commune retired from the contest at an early date.

DEFENSE OF THE BARRICADES.

Many tales are told of barricades defended in a heroic manner. Five women are said to have held one for several hours against all comers. Another, near the shop of GIROUX, on the Boulevard des Italiens, was long defended by one man armed with six rifles, which he discharged one after the other. The attacking force was, of course not acquainted with the weakness of the garrison, which quietly retreated when it had exhausted its ammunition. One regrets to learn that Commandant POULIZAC has fallen, killed by the insurgents. The commandant, owing to his wonderful exploits toward the end of the siege by the Prussians, became a kind of legendary hero and rivaled FRANCONETTE, the Hebrew, who fell at Champigny, and BERT, HOFF, whose exploits, nationality and final exit are still enveloped in mystery. POULIZAC was supposed to have been the terror of the Prussian outposts, which he was always snapping up. True, the dispatches which made POULIZAC famous were written by POULIZAC, but their authenticity has never been questioned in Paris, where he is regretted.

THE CASE OF TONY-MOILIN.

Long columns of prisoners are being marched to Versailles, where they are to be tried. Marshal MCMAHON, now that scarcely any more work remains to be done, has issued an order against the troops taking the law into their own hands. These military tribunals, in operation in the open street, committed some serious blunders, and it was high time to put an end to them. The son of a Colonel now fighting against the rebels was shot yesterday. It would have been well had many known scamps been kept, so that we might have heard their revelations. It is said that ERNEST, who was formerly a corporal in the Eighty-eighth, and who solicited the honor of shooting Gen. LECOMTE, has been arrested. As a reward for his gallant conduct on the 18th March, the Commune promoted him to the grade of Colonel of the Ninety-first Battalion. A well-known character, who has disappeared, is Dr. TONY-MOILIN, author of Paris in the Year 2000, occultist, and ex-delegate of the Commune. TONY-MOILIN used to put patches of various colors on the forehead and round the eyes of his patients, and I long wondered what could be the meaning of these red, green, and yellow spots. If TONY-MOILIN had stuck to his profession it might have been better for him. On the 18th March, having taken part in the revolution, he was made Maire and made himself somewhat conspicuous. Captured on Wednesday he was sentenced to be shot, but begged hard that he might be married before he died. This request was granted, and the ceremony was performed by the Maire into whose shoes the luckless TONY had stepped a couple of months ago. Two officers who kept a close eye on their prisoner served as best men to the unfortunate bridegroom, and the lady had hardly promised to love, honor and obey TONY, and cleave to him all the days of her life, before she was a widow. This marriage in extremis is one of the most dramatic events of the civil war. The doctor, like many other Republicans, has despised wedlock, but changed his opinion at the last moment for the sake of his children.

"HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF."

Sunday, 28.—A fine May morning, but in spite of M. THIERS' promises, the insurrection still holds its head above water. However, if one can still hear the big guns booming through the city, the priests have come out of their hiding places, and mass is being performed at most chapels. But, alas! the ungodly have not only plundered and defiled many of the churches, but have slaughtered a number of Christ's ministers. The Archbishop of Paris, denounced by his hopeful nephew, together with the curé of the Madelaine and a number of other ecclesiastics, have been massacred in cold blood. At the prisons of La Roquette, Mazas and St. Pelagie, the wretches of the Commune renewed the horrors of the massacres of September, conducted by DANTON. To a long list of atrocities perpetrated in this country to the Jacquerie, the St. Bartholomew, the Dragonades, the Terror and the fearful crimes which took place at the Restoration, must now be added the massacres of the Commune in May, 1871. To the priests they were about to slaughter these fiends said: "You need not fear death; you have been baptised." It appears that the Archbishop of Paris behaved in the most dignified way during his last moments, and that several of the insurgents asked his pardon for the crime they were going to commit. Yesterday, the Police Delegate FERRE went to La Roquette, and, releasing all the thieves and assassins confined there, let them loose on the gendarmes, over sixty of whom were instantly slaughtered by these miscreants.

THE LAST ACT.

Toward the afternoon the musketry and artillery fire began to die away, and I managed to get to Père Lachaise, close to which the final act in the drama was being played out. The cemetery I found hardly damaged at all, and the tale of the fierce combat there was purely imaginative. Here and there one could see the trace of a bullet on a tombstone, and one or two shells appear to have done some damage, but I did not see it. At the Heights of Chaumont the fighting had evidently been severe, and had the position been properly defended, it would have given the troops very serious trouble. At the barrier of La Villette, where the last band of insurgents was brought to bay this afternoon, the most desperate conflict must have been waged, if one can judge from the manner in which the houses in the neighborhood are torn with projectiles of every description, and the dead lie thick, especially round the Hotel of the Blue Sundial, which is a sight for gods and men. How this unfortunate house still remained standing is most wonderful; hardly a square inch of the frontage has escaped, and the best entertainment mine host can now afford is a sight of his ruined premises, which are worth a visit. It was here that the last barricade was carried, and no quarter was given to the defenders; the houses, too, in the neighborhood, were all carefully searched, and every man whose fingers betrayed that he had been handling cartridges was immediately shot. A proceeding which saved the Court Martial at Versailles a deal of unnecessary trouble. Now, thank goodness, the insurrection has been quelled, and I pray that we may have no more sanguinary complications just at present. But who is to reign in France, and how will that question be decided?

THE BONAPARTE DYNASTY.

Letter of Prince Napoleon to M. Jules Favre.

We have received the following copy of a letter addressed to M. JULES FAVRE by Prince NAPOLEON:

LONDON, 31st May, 1871.

France is signed with the conqueror. Paris, the grand capital in its flames; its finest and most venerable structures are reduced to ashes; blood flows in streams—your work is complete! The deep sorrow which weighs down each French heart must not be allowed to obscure that reason which has the right to require of you a strict reckoning for the accumulated disasters you have caused. The 4th September, the armistice discussed at Ferrieres, the defense of Paris, the preliminaries of Versailles, the 18th of March, the peace of Frankfort, the burning of Paris—behold your mournful dates! History will call you Dissenus fatal. Its will find in your conduct but one motive for action, the thirst for the name of NAPOLEON. The war fatale, commenced the 19th July, 1870, by the Empire, is terminated the 10th of this May by the Government without name to which you belong. But what is this Government? Is it the National Defense? No! for you have done nothing but capitulate. Is it a Government of National restoration? No! for France is invaded by anarchy and disorganization. Is it a monarchy? No! Is it a republic? Still less! Is it liberty? No! There was it at the elections oppressed by decrees or menaces of the Government after having falsified the choice of the citizens? It is a collection of every evil, held together by the absence of order, of security, of liberty and of strength. Let us descend the steps by which you have conducted us to the depths of the abyss. The 4th September you propose a dictatorship. You not gulded by it drive away your colleagues; you break your oath; against universal suffrage you proceed to usurp power at the Hotel de Ville. The Empire has committed great faults; our defeats were great, but our disasters date from you. Let each bear his part. Without doubt it was a grievous error to count too much upon the heart of France, and to commit in 1870 the fault which Prussia committed in 1806; to look too much to our victories under the great Republic and the First Empire; to think too little of the powerful enemy we had to combat; to contemplate the Crimea in 1854 and Italy in 1859 instead of calmly looking at the face of the German forces in 1870, headed by remarkable men. I neither wish to, nor can I, deny these faults, for which the NAPOLEONS pay far more heavily by their heartfelt grief than by their mere exile; but the Emperor has never sought to cling to the throne by a peace which might save me power by imposing too great sacrifices on France. Mark! we have old Republicans, the first of having fallen with the country, while, the contrary, your elevation dates from its misfortunes. You know better than any one the conditions which NAPOLEON III. could have obtained from Prussia at Sedan. Undoubtedly they were hard, but incomparably better than those accepted by you. Our sacrifices would not have been comparison with those you have accepted to, without reckoning that we should have avoided the months of disorder brought on by the Government of the Non-Defense of Paris, and by the odious and impotent dictature of those of your colleagues, emigrants in balloon, pillaging and oppressing our provinces. Up to the fall of the Empire we had submitted to great misfortunes, but these were reparable, as have been those you find recorded in the history of many great peoples; since the 4th of September, on the contrary, there are no longer such misfortunes, but there are disasters which find no parallel in history. The faults belong to the Empire, the disasters to you and to you alone. If, until the fault of the Empire, its grievance has not been to have tolerated within itself your criminal attempts. The inevitable consequence of your usurpation is the revolution of March 18, which you accuse today, and the burning of Paris, for which you are responsible. To defend Paris, you limited yourself to proclaiming imaginary successes. You have not utilized the terrible but vigorous elements which you had unlocosed, and which have held the soldiers of France in check for two months; and yet these were the same men, maddened since by demagogic frenzy, and with whom you might have aroused a patriotic fervor. It was the same National Guard, the same cannon, the same guns, the same forts, the same ramparts, the same barricades: all these forces remained paralyzed in your feeble hands, but would have been sublime if used against the foreigner. Know that the NAPOLEONS would have been patriotic enough to have blessed your triumph, and your own fall if you had saved France; but history will say that having promised to save the country you have lost it. In the interval you go to Ferrieres to shed your tears. I pity you! You pronounce there those dangerous words, which ought never to have been uttered by a statesman: "Not a stone of our fortresses, not one inch of our territory." Your conscience ought to feel the burden of this. For the honor of a French Minister, there ought in that conscience to have been enough of shame to require that another name than your own should be placed at the foot of an act declaring the grievous sacrifices rendered indispensable by accumulated faults. At Versailles the conqueror proposed the disarmament of the National Guard or that of the army, and you chose that of the soldiers, because you feared the Bonapartist elements in their ranks; while the elements of disorder, an irritated crowd, disorganized with itself, badly directed, humiliated and miserable elements which might have been expected to culminate in the terrible explosion of the Commune, did not even occupy you one moment. You sell France to the negotiating enemy in exchange for your personal republic. What could you give me? I will tell you. It was because the Foreign Minister made you comprehend the possibility of reassembling the old legislative body; then you signed anything! Let us continue. Your incapable conduct has brought on the triumph of the Commune at Paris, and on the part of the Germans demands which have increased every day. The negotiations unfolded as Favre-like nothing was concluded. You go to Frankfort. What do you do there? You sign there an aggravation of the preliminaries of peace. First—In abridging the time for payment of the indemnity. Second—In prolonging until December, 1871, the occupation of the Paris forts, which ought to have been evacuated after the payment of the first 20,000,000. Third—In thus making Prussia recognize her duty to accept the responsibility of so much of the old debt of France as related to the departments given up, proportioned to the territory or the number of inhabitants; this is only common right, and is what was done in the case of Nice, Savoy, Nice, and Venetia—always. Did not Prussia herself in 1866 take upon her the responsibility of the debts of Hanover, Electoral Hesse, and the Grand Duchy of Nassau? Even in the might of their victory, the Prussian negotiators could not have openly refused you. You will again tell your friends your hands are shamefully tied. It was because they let you see the possibility of an appeal to the French people; then in your haste you gave up everything, and once more at Frankfort, as at Versailles, you sacrificed France to your blind hate. It is necessary to admit that there was no chance of success to obtain even the slightest delay. The result of all they had to do was to show you the possibility of the triumph of the will of the French people. I do not judge those who, under the frightful circumstances, have accepted the perhaps inevitable preliminaries of Versailles, and still less do I judge the Assembly which ratified them. I do not believe that I have the right. But you; you are inexcusable for your acts of the 4th of September, for having badly defended Paris, for having pledged the country by a mere rhetorician's phrase, for having kept arms in the hands of an overexcited population—arms which were thenceforth useless against the foreigner and dangerous to themselves; for having aggravated the preliminaries by the treaty of peace; and, alas! in a word, by having finished with the destruction of Paris. You have filled up the cup to the brim—France is indignant, and posterity will judge you. In the darkness in which France is plunged, in face of those furious who, in their delirium, burn our monuments, overturn the column, and break the glorious bronze of which each fragment makes a wound in the heart of each of our soldiers—it is necessary to seek for healthy light. This is not to be found in the intrigues of pretenders, but in the will of the nation itself; otherwise there can be nothing but struggle and confusion. It is not in a principle which is the negation of modern society; in a white flag which France no longer remembers; in the negation of universal suffrage; in the "white terror" succeeding the red terror; in the fusion of pretenders; in the return of the French SUARTS; it is not thus that France can find the haven of safety. No, for a new society, a new symbol is required. It requires—and modern right wills it—the abdication of all before the will of the people freely and directly expressed. Besides this—once more I repeat—there is nothing but chaos. Faith in monarchy cannot be imposed. The only base upon which a Government in France can affirm its principle, the only source from which it can draw legitimacy and force, is by an appeal to the people, which we claim, and on which France ought to insist.

NAPOLEON (JEROME.)

TROCHU AND DUCROT.

The History of the Siege of Paris Demanded—Promised Chapters of Interest.

Versailles (May 31) Correspondence London Times.

Yesterday's sitting of the Chamber was very lively, and at times even stormy. Its interest began with the discussion of a motion originally brought forward by LOUIS BLANC and others, but by them abandoned, and then adopted by other Deputies, the object of which was to require the members of the Ex-Government of National Defense to render an account of their stewardship in Paris during the siege. Gen. TROCHU ascended the tribune, and the Chamber and the galleries hushed their conversations and prepared to listen attentively to what some, very justly, additionally called his "sortie"—in allusion to the decisive movement his enemies say he ought to have made from Paris. TROCHU has an agreeable presence, an excellent delivery, a clear and sonorous voice. After having striven almost in vain, on the previous day, to catch the words of CHARGARNIER and THIERS, it was interesting to listen to so distinct and effective an orator. He supported the motion. During the latter portion of the siege of Paris, he said, irresponsible persons having the favor of the mob, labored to discredit those responsible men who had the enemy in front and famine in their rear. The enemy was now gone, and the moment had come to settle the question raised by those accusations. Of the three motions tending to do this, one had been withdrawn by its authors, while the men who signed the other two had since left the Assembly and become leaders of the Commune. These circumstances deprived the charges brought of a part of their authority, but it left them all their interest. The condition of Paris was the offspring of Wissembourg, Reichshoffen, Forbach and Sedan. He proposed to examine the whole military question. The time had arrived to apply calmly the lessons of each Army of the necessity of great moral and organic reforms. The national character, or rather the national temperament, has its brilliant qualities, unfortunately more brilliant than solid. If a victory is won the troops are declared invincible, the officers excellent, the Generals illustrious. A defeat changes everything. The troops are bad, the Generals incapable. Everybody in France esteems himself a competent judge in military matters, but the cry of the crowd against a defeated General always is that he has sold and betrayed his army. TROCHU continued: "We have too much pride to attribute our reverses to any other cause than treason and incapacity. We have not the dignity which leads vanquished nations to look at home for the causes of their faults. We are a great nation, which systematically puerile education has enchanced in its intellect. It is vanquished, ruined, and it asks the reason why. I will give it the reason. I will not imitate these French revolutionary mode of proceeding, which consists in assailing individuals, but I will deal with Constitutions and Governments. I will show the country that it has prepared its own ruin, by intriguing the control of its own affairs; by allowing the self-seeking and pernicious devotion, as natural to the French Army, to degenerate into personal speculation; by permitting the introduction into the habits of the nation of that double course of which you know the double origin, English luxury, Italian corruption. The General attributed to these causes the cause of the decrease of families in France—the non-increase of the population. The periodical increase in Prussia, he said, was as six to two compared with France. When the debate upon the motion before the Assembly should come on, he proposed to sketch an authentic page of military and contemporary history. He would advance nothing that could not be irrefutably proved and substantiated. He would show the causes of the decline of the French Army, of the disasters of the Army of the Rhine, of the revolution of the 4th of September, causes which have been systematically concealed from the country; he would narrate the siege of Paris and the campaign in the provinces. He would commence with the siege of Paris, because the motion before the Assembly especially related to it. "There will be truths to be told, infamies to expose, calumnies to obliterate, and, above all, elements of information for the reform of the French Army." The General left the tribune amid loud applause, which had also repeatedly interrupted him in the course of his speech. He had spoken slowly, clearly, impressively, at times with very happy choice of expressions, and his promised exposition of facts will be awaited with strong interest. He has plenty who envy and hate him, and one has not to be a partisan to say that his speech would not have lowered a lawyer of a line of letters than a soldier, but in England you are accustomed to look upon literary accomplishments and power of argument as quite compatible with the highest military qualities.

NEWS NOTES.

The Paris Gaulois says that an attempt to assassinate Gen. DE GALLIFET had been made by a woman, but had failed. The cable reported the success of the endeavor.

A cable telegram concerning a terrible earthquake at "Hue" has already been published in these columns; over four hundred persons had perished, and the place had been devastated. Confirmatory intelligence of this report had been received in Liverpool, with the correction, however, that the earthquake occurred in the Island of Bintang, the largest of the group called Rhio Islands, and on the southwest coast of which there is a large Dutch city called Rhio, which is of great commercial importance—in fact, next to Singapore, from which place it is distant about fifty miles. It is the most active and prosperous trading port in the Eastern Archipelago, having a population of between 30,000 and 40,000 people.

His Highness LEOPOLD FREDERICK, Duke of Anhalt, expired at 10¾ o'clock on the 22d May, after a painful illness of more than a week. He was born on the 1st October, 1794, and succeeded his grandfather, Duke LEOPOLD, of Anhalt-Dessau, on the 9th August, 1817. On the death of Duke HENRY (23d November, 1847,) he succeeded to the Duchy of Anhalt-Köthen, and on the death of Duke ALEXIS (10th August, 1863,) to the Duchy of Anhalt-Bernburg. His successor is Duke LEOPOLD FREDERICK (born 29th April, 1831, who is Lieutenant-General à la suite in the Prussian Army.

A motion was made in the French Legislative Assembly on June 2, by JULES BRUNET, Deputy of the Left, for the abrogation of the decree which gave to the exile of the BONAPARTES, and of the law of 1848, proscribing the House of BOURBON. The Right of the Chamber apparently would not allow the initiative of a motion having for its object the recall of the BOURBONS to be left to a Deputy of the extreme Left, notorious for his radical opinions, and a counter proposition in a single article was immediately given in, carried by many deputies, and "urgency" was demanded. It was adopted by a great majority. Deputy BUSSON, referring to the words "Maison de Bourbon" in the proposition of the Right, asked if the elder branch, or the younger, or the union of both, was meant. Deputy RANCHON replied that he would answer the question.

Count MOLTKE says in a letter to the poet OSCAR VON REDWITZ, who addressed to him his "Song of the New German Empire:" "To the poet it is permitted to be prodigal. He sows with full hands diamonds and pearls, the stars of heaven and the flowers of earth, and it is the same spirit that germs in his prisoners. In this sense only do I receive your song comparing me to the great men of the past. These have been great also in adversity, and especially in adversity. We have had nothing but successes. Let it be called chance, destiny, fortune, or the ways of Providence—men alone are no gods nor is Conquest a crime. There are in this generality of the result of a state of things which we can neither create nor dominate. The excellent, but unfortunate, Pope ADRIAN had the following words engraved on his tomb: 'How different is the action of even the best of men according to the time in which he lives! More than once the most capable have failed, owing to the invincible force of circumstances, while a less capable has been carried by it to success.' If I see myself constrained, not by a false and vain modesty, to consider as not deserved part of the praises bestowed on me, I am not the less thankful for them; for verses like yours may last longer than many a bronze or marble monument."

A correspondent of the Levant Herald, writing from Tabreez under date of April 26, says: "The details which reach us here of the destitution and misery which the drought of last year has caused in the central and southern provinces of Persia are fearfully heartrending. That the people are dying of hunger even in the streets of the capital is a minor phase of this terrible calamity. In Khorassan parents are selling their children as slaves to the Turcomans in order to keep them alive; and in Ispahan, as is said, men have been seized in the act of digging up the corpses to serve as food for the starving families. In Shiraz, Kerman and Yezd the wretched sufferers endeavor to support life on the grass and roots which they may find in the neighborhood, and, as might be expected, pestilence follows hard on the footsteps of famine; between them the half of the kingdom of Persia is being rapidly depopulated."

A Very Aggravated Case of Reckless Shooting.

From the Virginia (Nevada) Enterprise.

A certain newspaper man of this city was presented with a Henry rifle. This rifle became his idol. It was seldom out of his sight, and he could not sleep unless it rested against the head of his bed. On Sundays he was always out on the hills with his Henry, and in a short time became so expert that he could decapitate a sage hen nine times out of ten. He once saw a duck disporting itself in a lake somewhere in the eastern part of the State, and, on a bet, shot out both its eyes. This created a sensation of horror—everything in the shape of game—being invited to spend a few days with a friend residing near Carson City, packed up his Henry and responded in person. Next morning he was up bright and early, and, like a second Steve Vervaard, stalked forth in search of game. A short walk brought him in sight of a pond in which was a fine flock of ducks. Creeping to cover near the shore, he opened his battery. Duck after duck was stretched upon the water, and still those remaining made no attempt to fly away. Our Nimrod was somewhat astonished at the tameness of the game, but no merciful thought arose; on the contrary, he became, if possible, still more bloodthirsty. He had just stretched out lifeless the last of a flock of about seventeen ducks, when the friend, whose hospitality he was sharing, came running toward him calling upon him for Heaven's sake to desist, as he was killing the whole of his favorite breed of farm fowls. What did Nimrod do but turn about and vigorously protest that he thought the ducks were wild ones. After this exploit he even had the cheek to remain at the house of his friend a whole week, feasting on ducks every day.

ROBERT E. LEE.

From the Richmond Dispatch, June 13.

Gen. LEE viewed the situation in a military sense. He considered his countrymen of the South and himself as captives and prisoners. His high sense of honor and personal dignity would not permit him to rail at those who held him in custody. He truly considered that unmanly and peevish. To indulge the language of exasperation or the wail of lamentation was equally abhorrent to his ideas of true manhood. He therefore bore himself like a man with a conscience void of offense, knowing that he was at the mercy of his captors, and submitting himself to their power.

Nothing gave Gen. LEE so much concern as the haste with which the Press and public men of the South rushed into the political canvass, deluded by the ignis fatuus set up by President JOHNSON after his infamous 20,000 amnesty proclamation. He did not think it wise or becoming. Adhering to his idea of what should be, the obstruct of captives, he feared, and justly feared, that while this was unbecoming in the Southern people, it would exasperate those who held us at their mercy, and increase the severity of the sufferings of his own people. He was not anxious for himself.

As late as a month prior to his death he held to his opinions on this point. The writer of this then met him, and beginning with the assurance that he was no interviewer, as the General knew, and would make no improper use of any remark he might make, asked him how he felt about the political condition of the country. He replied that he thought there was some improvement, but still there was a great deal to deplore in regard to the temper of the discussions North and South—that they opposed a great obstacle to the restoration of peace. He alluded particularly to the tone of the Southern Press, and said that though greatly improved, there was still room for improvement. We put in a plea for the Press in respect to its promptness in vindicating the South from false accusations, and as an illustration referred to an article in this paper commending upon the surprise expressed by a Northern journal that Gen. LEE could possibly have fought with the South, as he was opposed to slavery. In that comment we showed that the opposition to slavery was not rare in the South—that Virginia had been very near abolishing slavery in '30, and that many prominent Southern men, adopting Mr. JEFFERSON'S views, favored abolition as the policy for the welfare of the Southern people; and that these men had a higher motive than the defense of slavery in their taking up the cause of the South.

The General replied that controversy did no good—that the Northern journal should have known his opinions long ago—that he expressed them before the Reconstruction Committee, and was ever to their questions—that his father before him was opposed to slavery as a public evil in Virginia. All this ought to be known, and his motives in standing by his native State ought to be known everywhere. But controversy is unavailing, said he; it does no good, and only protracts the day of peace and national harmony. In this spirit he conversed a while, and then chang

THE GROCERY TRADE.

Movement to Organize a Trade Guild—Reforms to Follow—New-York Grocery Business Worth Looking After—Benefits of the Grocery Trade—With the Chamber of Commerce.

The movement in the grocery trade, which may be said to have been inaugurated at the meeting in Water-street, the day before yesterday, for the establishment of a Grocery Guild, nothing either in connection with the Chamber of Commerce or as an independent organization, is the topic of general conversation in trade circles. The necessity for this organization is founded upon the magnitude of the interests involved, requiring, as is generally considered, special cognizance by men acquainted with the business. The following are some of the explanations given to the TIMES reporter, who in the course of yesterday visited some representative firms to ascertain their views upon the subject.

The immediate question now under official consideration is in reference to the practice which has crept into the trade of sellers of teas being personally present in the office of the broker during his dealings with buyers. It has come to be felt that this is liable to many abuses, such as the brokers' manner to a certain extent of the instrument or tool in the hands of the particular seller or sellers who are present, to the detriment of those who are away. Buyers have, therefore, been forced to be there personally to send out their clerks and friends to round among the brokers' offices, and where there were sellers by twos, or three buyers in a broker's office, there is a mixture of interests over which it is not easy to keep order, and sometimes a display of feeling and manners anything but creditable to men of business. The thing has in its indecorous aspect, which may be left to the imagination of the reader, but as a matter of business it is generally felt to place both broker and buyer in an awkward position, it certainly being the business of the former to give the latter a fair opportunity of selecting his teas from the samples before him, without feeling under the pressure of some particular seller to favor one sample over another.

There are other minor evils of a local character which require adjustment by a Guild, as soon as it shall be formed, and also questions of a commercially serious, which, in the judgment of many, demand the existence in this City of a live committee or guild to watch over the special interest concerned. For example, an immense amount of commerce is annually diverted from New-York by the Baltimore & Ohio Steamboat arrangements of other cities. There are other questions, such as railroad freights, tariff charges, taxes, the arbitrament of disputes requiring immediate settlement at a minimum cost to the disputants, and many others, all of which call for the frequent action of a discriminating examination, possessing the command of the minds at large.

It is alleged that the Chamber of Commerce is more adapted for the treatment of questions affecting commerce especially than of those of a sectar particular trades, and it is argued that as the produce trade feels it necessary to have a special chamber it is reasonable to suppose that the grocery trade is certainly not far behind in the magnitude of the interests involved, to have a similar institution, and that for the want of it the trade suffers, and the City becomes a proportionate loser.

The only question upon which there is likely to be a difference of opinion and upon this it is understood that the Chamber of Commerce may have something to say—is whether all that is proposed to accomplish by the establishment of a separate guild may not be done better through a branch of the Chamber, specially constituted for that purpose. This view is supported by the meeting on Monday, and which also favors the committee the respect and confidence of the trade, are discussing this and other points of detail, and will shortly render a report to another general meeting. That some definite action will be taken to the premises is almost beyond doubt.

BASE-BALL.

Hickford vs. Athletic—The Former Victorious.

The contest between the Brooklyn Athletics and the Hickfords, yesterday, proved to be a very one-sided game indeed, the Athletics allowing MARTIN to out-pitch them in nine innings, without their earning a solitary run. They did not score any until the eighth inning, when, by the failure of the umpire to see a low fly catch made by NELSON, the Athletics escaped a blank. Their fielding, too, was worse than the batting, the number of the latter's errors being charged to them of which 15 gave the Hickfords as many lives at first base. If the Athletics play so better on Friday, they will be badly beaten by the Excelsiors. They were short their catcher, and had a poor substitute at right field, but that was no excuse for the errors committed. The following is the score:

Mutuals vs. Rockfords.

The Forest City nine of Rockford, played their second game with the Mutuals, yesterday, on the Union Grounds, in the presence of about 1,000 people, and the game proved to be a very interesting one and a closely-contested match, it being anybody's game up to the close of the eighth inning, at which time the score stood 7 to 6 only, the Mutuals leading by one run. In the ninth innings the New-Yorkers punished FISHER'S pitching for 6 earned runs, and thereby came in the victors by a total of 12 to 6. Today the Mutuals play their second game with the White Stockings.

A Murderer Shot and his Body Burned.

The California papers publish a telegram dated Oroville, in that State, June 5, which gives the following account of the death of the young man, who, enraged by her rejection of his offer of marriage, murdered Miss LIZZIE MCDANIELS, by cutting her throat as she, with two companions, was wending along a highway: Yesterday afternoon, six of the party tracked the lurking "Austrian George" arrived in town, reporting that he had escaped from Bloomer Hill. All were at fault, and greater vigilance became necessary, lest he should cross the river and find a hiding place in town. All the ferries, bridges, and small boats were watched, and every precaution taken to arrest him, should he attempt crossing. About 10 P. M. two men, watching, heard a man crossing the Bidwell Bar Bridge, which spans Feather River nine miles above here. He was commanded to halt, and he proved to be the murderer. Surrendering his rifle, he was marched to the house of J. C. BENDLE to be bound, and, arriving at the house, he gave up his knife, but, as they were about binding him, he drew a revolver, placed it to his head, and pulled the trigger, but, catching in his sleeve, it missed fire. Mr. BENDLE caught the weapon from him, when he broke away and ran for his life. Mr. BENDLE fired at him with the revolver, hitting him three times, twice in the back, the last shot through the head, killing him instantly. His body was conveyed to his cabin at Cherokee Flat, the scene of the murder. A large crowd had assembled to receive the body upon its arrival, and became greatly excited, and Sheriff MILLER addressed them advising moderation. The statements of BENDLE and McBRIDE, who had arrested him, were then given, and a proposition was made to burn the body. All agreeing, the cabin was torn down, a large pile made of it in an open field, his body was placed standing upon it, a can of oil was thrown over the whole, and the pyre set on fire, and amid the shouting and rejoicing of the executioners was consumed by the flames. Eye-witnesses describe the scene of the burning as frightful in the extreme. Had he been captured alive his punishment would have been death by fire.

THE REPUBLICAN DISBANDMENT.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Tribune of Friday contains a communication, in which a "Republican" of the Tammany order pretends to give a sketch of what he calls the history of the Republican Party in this City for a few years past. The object obviously is to make an attack upon those members of the party who are now seeking to emancipate its organization from the control which Tammany Hall has gained over it. With an obvious appreciation of the fitness of things, OAKEY HALL copies the communication in full into the Leader of Saturday. The communication calls for a few observations in comment or reply.

The first thing that strikes me in reading the remarks of "Republican" is that if he is correct, then Gen. GRANT has selected as the Collector of the Port of New-York a very astute, far-seeing politician, for the whole burden of the communication is to show how for six or eight years past Mr. MURPHY has managed to foresee the political history of the State and country, to hold on to power and patronage in the State so long as that should last, and then to grasp the patronage of the National Government, and to show that in accomplishing the latter object he has known how to "ride a waiting race," to keep in the background till Mr. GRINNELL'S mistakes should render his removal necessary, and then by social influences and a skillful grouping of political devices to capture Gen. GRANT. In doing this Mr. MURPHY is represented as using and deceiving various persons, till he finally inveigles Gen. BUTLER with a promise of a few offices. Whether Mr. MURPHY possesses the great abilities which "Republican" thus ascribes to him, it is beside my present purpose to examine. I only desire to observe that the gentlemen with whom "Republican" acts have not hitherto been willing to concede to him any such capacity.

The second thing that strikes me in this communication is the frank recognition it contains of the fact that the present opposition to a reorganization of the Republican Party in this City, springs, really, from opposition to Gen. GRANT and his administration. It has hitherto been the cue of such persons to declare that they were supporters of the Administration, that it was true Gen. GRANT had been deceived into appointing a Collector, a Surveyor, a Naval Officer, an Appraiser and other officers who were betraying the Republican Party and misleading him, but that the devotion to the President, and the heroic unchangeable virtue of such men as COCHRANE, TOUSEY, STEWART, and others, was so great that they were determined to cling to him till his eyes were opened, and he cast out MURPHY and his followers. They declared loudly and repeatedly that they were supporters of the Administration, though they mingled with their opposition to the San Domingo scheme—with reference to which good men did and do differ—the vilest insinuations as to the personal integrity of the President, and attacked in bad rhetoric and worse taste, the course of the majority of the Republicans of the Senate. Gradually since Mr. GREELEY has become an admitted candidate for the Presidency, they and his organ have thrown off their disguise, till finally "Republican" announces not only that "the fight in this State, on the surface, is Grant and anti-Grant," but that "the President made this issue himself," and that if in this contest the anti-Grant men are defeated, "there will surely be a split, and New-York will be contested in the National Convention." For one, I thank "Republican" for his frankness, and accept the issue. While aware how rapidly events transpire, and fully recognizing the necessity that the Republican Party should in the next Presidential campaign, select its strongest candidate, I say confidently that at present, in the opinion of the majority of the Republican Party of the State of New-York, including in that majority its shrewdest men, Gen. GRANT is by all odds the strongest candidate; that for several months past he has been growing in strength and popularity, and that they now see no one who is likely to seriously compete with him.

"Republican," through more than a fourth of his communication rings the changes on "WEED, MURPHY & Co.," endeavoring to drag into the controversy some supposed odium attaching to a gentleman who has long since passed from the political arena, and with whom it is notorious that Mr. MURPHY has as little connection as Mr. GREELEY has had since he formally dissolved the firm of WEED, GREELEY & Co. "Republican" insinuates, rather than asserts, that Mr. MURPHY attended the Philadelphia and Albany Conventions of 1866, and concurred in the passage of resolutions in favor of Gov. HOFFMAN. "Republican" knows, if he knows anything, that these statements are untrue; that they were made, denied, and fully disproved when Mr. MURPHY'S name was before the Senate.

The Johnson defection of 1866 was coincident with a natural resentment on the part of Mr. MURPHY, at treachery and double-dealing toward him by Gov. FENTON, but he was led thereby into no betrayal of the Republican Party. "Republican" must have confused him with Hon. THOMAS E. STEWART, who is too sincere a Republican to have anything to do with the reorganization of the party, and whose letter announcing that fact the Tribune has recently gloried in publishing, and who is also the first signer of the protest against reorganization published by Mr. GREELEY'S Committee. Mr. STEWART became in 1866 a member of the Democratic State Committee, and remained such till about the time he became the leading light in the present Tammany Republican Association of his district of the City, and the General Committee. "Republican" was obviously correct in the biography of Mr. STEWART.

"Republican," with some confusion of chronology, says that at the session of the Legislature in 1867 Messrs. FOLGER, CROWLEY and ANDREWS acted with the Democrats, and refused to confirm Gov. FENTON'S nominations for certain offices, and confederated with the Democrats to create the Tax and Custom Boards, and other offices. These gentlemen did, it is true, exercise the right which the Constitution gave them, of voting against names which they did not approve, and refusing to aid Gov. FENTON to build up a personal, instead of a Republican Party. So far as can be inferred from subsequent events, their course has met the approval of the party. Judge FOLGER was immediately re-elected by a majority of some 1,200 or 1,500 in a district which soon after gave to a friend of Senator FENTON, whom Judge FOLGER resigned, a majority of about 200. At a later period Mr. GREELEY described Judge FOLGER as a "sterling Republican," and the people of the whole State placed him upon the Bench of the Court of Appeals, while the Republicans of his district are content to take Mr. CROWLEY as their representative in the State Committee. Mr. ANDREWS, the third Senator mentioned, is in New-York, holding a place at the will, though not originally at the gift, of Tammany. If it was a crime against the Republican Party for Mr. FOLGER to take it when the Tax Commission was a non-partisan Commission, it is not for those who defend the holding of office by Republicans in partisan Boards, and by the gift of TWEED, SWEENY & Co., and who themselves hold such places, to attack him for it.

The TAX COMMISSION was not created in 1867, nor before GRANT was nominated, as "Republican" implies, but in 1869, after GRANT'S nomination and election, and at a time when Gov. FENTON had entire control of the appointments under the National Administration. The Court of Appeals had declared the Tax Commission appointed by Gov. FENTON to be an unconstitutional body, and a new one was necessarily created, appointed by local authority. It was non-partisan till Tammany, not content with buying SANDS, provided for a fifth Commissioner, since which time Gen. ARTHUR and others resigned, at considerable pecuniary sacrifice, and the only Republicans holding office under it are those who act with the Twenty-second-street Committee, like EITTERBAND, HASTIE, GRIDLEY, and others too pure to consent to a reorganization of the party.

What the other Commissions are to which "Republican" refers, as created by a confederation with the Democrats, I do not know. I do know, however, that there is no City board, commission, or office the absolute right of appointment to and removal from which does not now rest with Tweed, Sweeny & Co., and that there is, on the one hand, no such commission, board, or office which contains a single Republican who is in favor of a reorganization of the party, and that, on the other hand, not only is there no City board, commission, or department which does not contain a number of so-called Republicans, who are loud-mouthed against reorganization, but that a very large portion of the officers of the local associations, and of the members of the General Committee, are or have been, till within a week or two, drawing the money of Tammany, and subsisting on the crumbs dropped to them by Tweed, Sweeny & Co., while seeking to direct the councils of the Republican PARTY. This fact cannot be denied, and is alone a conclusive answer to the absurd insinuation that the gentlemen engaged in the movement for a reorganization have any sympathy with Tammany.

With reference to the reorganization, I can tell "Republican" something he may not know. The campaign against Tammany, though often talked about, was actively opened at Saratoga last August, when HORACE GREELEY, at a meeting of the Republican State Committee, broke ground against the influence of Tammany in the Republican councils, and openly denounced "Hank SMITH," as he called him, as a spy and a traitor in the Committee of which he was a member. Mr. GREELEY subsequently followed this attack by an attempt to exclude him and Mr. MANIERRE from the State Committee of the present year, an attempt in which he was, unfortunately, successful only so far as related to the latter. If Mr. GREELEY has since chosen to eat his words and accept position at the hands of HENRY SMITH, BENJAMIN F. MANIERRE, RUFUS F. ANDREWS, JOHN V. GRIDLEY, DANIEL D. CONOVER and others whom he has repeatedly denounced as mere Tammany hirelings in the Republican ranks, it is a matter of regret, and furnishes another of the many proofs existing of his ignorance of human nature, and the facility with which flattery deceives him. But those who were with him in the fight, at the outset, will remain in it till success crowns their efforts or defeat surrenders the party, bound hand and foot, to Tammany. In that contest they will have the aid of all sincere Republicans and the supporters of the National Administration. If it is, as "Republican" says, a contest of "GRANT" and "Anti-Grant," it is because here, as ever, GRANT is contending against treachery and corruption, and that whether he attacks those who are trying to overthrow the Constitution of the country, or those who are endeavoring to undermine the great party whose representative he is, he sees with equal clearness the end to be accomplished, and the means by which it is to be accomplished. "Republican" admits that those who are now forming a reorganization of the party controlled the State Convention in 1870. He says it was done with the aid of patronage. Be it so. Does he or any other thinking men believe that the Convention of 1871 will be of different mind, when not only is the influence of the National Administration more openly with those who favor reorganization, but the fact has become patent to the people of the entire State that the influence and money of Tammany Hall is openly against such a reorganization? Tammany may buy up a few Republicans by Police Commissionerships, Collectorships of Assessments, and other positions in the City of New-York, and may corrupt a few members of the Legislature, and some local politicians by money or by office, but it cannot control the party of the State when attention is called to its plans. Even Westchester will refuse to support her favorite sons, now that she finds that they hold lucrative offices under Tammany Hall, in this City and at Albany respectively, while the Republicans through the State will "spot" those who have fallen victims to Tammany's money. "Republican" sees this clearly. Hence his threat of a "bolt;" but he will find the number of bolters identical with the number of Republicans on Tammany's pay-roll.

ANTI-TAMMANY.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

The Collision on the Grand Trunk Railroad—Five Lives Lost.

A special telegram to the Toronto Globe gives the following particulars of the collision on the Grand Trunk Railroad, near Grafton, on Sunday morning about 8 o'clock: "A train coming from the East, with a large number of immigrants, collided with a freight-train standing at the station, thereby knocking several cars off the track, and causing a general smash-up. The engineer, conductor and one of the immigrants were killed instantly, and the fireman had his leg mangled horribly, rendering amputation necessary. Several others were injured, many narrowly escaping with their lives. The express-train from the East had not arrived more than two minutes before the collision took place. A lady, who showed great presence of mind, prevented a still more terrible disaster. The express is said to have carried a red flag, indicating another train was close behind. But no efficient steps, it seems, were taken to warn that train—bearing immigrants—of the danger. Young ALLEN was sent down to the switch, and observing the train rushing down grade at high speed, and knowing that the two tracks were occupied, he turned the switch upon the freight-train instead of allowing the collision to take place with the passenger-train. The slaughter would have been frightful had the train been allowed to go straight ahead, as the morning was foggy, and no one was apprehensive of danger.

Another report gathered from parties who have arrived from Grafton, states that the engine-driver and fireman on the immigration train were killed, or received injuries from which death ensued in a few hours. The conductor and brakesman of the freight-train were killed, and those with the immigrant make five lives slaughtered. The names of the engine-driver and fireman were DOUGALL CAMPBELL and LIDDELL. Last night they were brought to this city, where they resided.

There is peace again in the church family of Shakers, the two elopers who went out and were married, having, in twenty-four short hours, become weary of the world and its sinful ways, and returned to the shelter—cold again where they were received with outstretched arms and unhesitating forgiveness. ILL, they say, was "not such a bad man, after all; he only got a fool notion." As to the money-matter, the rumors were entirely groundless.

GEORGIA.

The Rains and the Crops—Failure of the Cotton—Railroad Troubles—Monopolies and New Lines—Poverty of the Planters.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MACON, Ga., Saturday, June 10, 1871.

"Rain, rain, rain; pitiless, ceaseless rain," says WASHINGTON IRVING, describing a "wet spell" which he experienced in a village inn in England. If the cotton planters of Georgia were asked to describe the rains which for weeks have deluged their crops, suspended all cultivation and blighted their prospects, they would certainly call them pitiless and ceaseless. The injury already done is incalculable, and if the wet weather continues it will ruin everything but the grass, which naturally grows apace. For the last twenty-four hours we have had no thunder, lightning or rain, but the clouds are gathering again for another storm. The cotton crop has been cut off fully one-fourth on an average all over the State, and in many places the cotton-fields have been or will be plowed up and corn-planted. Nor has corn escaped. All that which was planted on low lands has been so drenched that it has turned yellow, and will be, in many places, almost a total failure. Upland corn is doing very well, and will yield abundantly. Wheat and oats have been badly damaged by rust, and what the rust has not destroyed will be ruined by the rain, whether it has been reaped or not. Early in the Spring the wheat and oat crops promised to be very large. It will be far below an average in many places. So far as I can learn, the rust has been most injurious to the crops raised from Georgia seed. Wheat and oats raised from Northern, or foreign-grown seed, have either partially or wholly escaped. I have not heard of a single instance of oats grown from Prince Edward Island seed which has been attacked by rust.

The community here are very much "exercised" by the recent fusion of the Macon and Western Railroad, from here to Atlanta, a distance of 103 miles, with the Central Railroad, from Savannah to Columbus. Without the least warning, the stunning announcement was made one rainy morning, that the Central had leased the Macon and Western for ninety-nine years, thus getting absolute control of the direct road north via Atlanta, in addition to the control obtained a couple of years ago by the lease of the South-western Railroad from here to Albany and to Eufaula, Ala., and by arrangement with the roads going west, over the whole line from the Atlantic coast at Savannah to the Mississippi at Vicksburg. Macon is opposed to this centralization, because she is exposed to a discrimination in favor of Savannah, and because of the threatened annihilation of the recently-financed Macon and Brunswick Railroad—a competing line from here to the coast—which will now be cut off from all freight business in connection with the Macon and Western. As an evidence of Macon's earnestness in opposition to the fusion, she has sued out and obtained an injunction against the consummation of the lease, and the case will be argued in the Superior Court in a few days, to be decided finally by the Supreme Court some time next month.

This railroad discussion has revived interest in the projected Macon and Knoxville Railroad, which is to run due north and south between Macon and Knoxville, Tenn., connecting this place with Cincinnati by a line of 490 miles long, shortening the distance fully 240 miles—the present roads via Louisville, Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta being 700 miles in length. The last Legislature chartered this road, and gave it $15,000 a mile as State aid. The surveys of 117 miles of the road from Macon northward have been completed, and the rest of the work is being pushed forward rapidly. The proposed route will traverse a productive country from here to Dahlonega, near the Tennessee line, now totally undeveloped, and independent of agricultural products, containing rich mines of gold, silver, copper, iron, nickle, coal and marble. Mr. VIRGIL POWERS, a railroad manager of long experience, reports that after the first forty miles of the road are built it will pay seven per cent. on the cost of construction and equipment. It will bring Knoxville nearer to this city than Chattanooga is now, and Cincinnati nearer than Louisville, Ky., to southern Georgia. The West has long been seeking a direct line of connection with the south Atlantic, and this proposed route will afford it. It is not astonishing that Macon desires this road. It would make her one of the most important commercial cities in the South, emancipate her at once from dependence on the roads that now run by her, and give her control of her own destiny.

The rapid rise in the price of cotton has been of little or no benefit to the planters. Not one in a thousand was able to hold his crop, consequently the advance has only been of profit to the speculators. Money is reported plenty, and yet nobody has any. Economy of the most rigid and biting sort is the order of the day. Hog and hominy is literally the food of many a family which used to ride in chaises, and even the use of tea, coffee and sugar is often given up in disgust by those who know what it was to have a wish ungratified. Fortunately, provisions are falling, and are now within reach of the most needy. If not, the Irish game of "point" would have been a very general prandial entertainment.

QUONDAM.

SARATOGA.

Preparations for the Season—The Gambling Question—Opposition of the Residents to the Club-Houses—General Matters.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SARATOGA, Monday, June 12, 1871.

To one only used to the "season" this quiet place is hardly recognizable as Saratoga, for the life, the view, the spirit, is gone, or rather, is not yet arrived, to put it in proper phrase. The long verandas of the Grand Union, stately and massive, need the appliances of civilization to set off their beauty, and the ponderous WARREN sits listlessly upon his threshold, cordial and pleasant to all who come, and offering his accommodations as genially as ever, but showing in his manner he can only be himself when he finds it necessary to improvise rooms and to idealize beds.

The season is in advance of last year, and the prophets look to this as the greatest of Saratoga years. Since the new medical idea of no medicine, and in its place the treatment of climate and mineral-water has become something more than an idea, the waters of Saratoga have taken a new start, and people who have lived on drugs now propose to be cured on water. In many cases this wisdom has come too late, but not in all. The Water-cure is full, and wonderful relief has been found from a purely medical use of the waters. The tide of invalid travel has turned in this direction, and when some capitalist shall erect a vast hotel, containing the appliances of comfort that renders the Grand Union and Congress so delightful, and with a table reduced to the wants of feeble stomachs as well as economical in price, shall offer to people of limited means what they cannot now get in this resort—comfort and reasonable charges—then doctors may shut up their prescription-books, and give chronic patients to the care of nature. Of course there will always be use for the great hotels. No man need be lonely here, for he will find associates at all hours, and at all times. The old proverb, "What can't be cured must be endured" is of no force, for the sparkling waters will steal away a headache ere we are aware, and lay a foundation for breakfast on a stomach whose bitterness would put to shame the apples of Sodom.

THE CLUB-HOUSES.

A season of unusual moral activity has commenced in Saratoga, and the subject of gambling is being discussed. When, last year, MORRISSEY permitted ladies to visit his celebrated club-house, a breeze was started among the local powers that has finally overcome the city fathers, and the universal belief is, that all the club-houses are doomed. The chiefs of these places, however, do not seem to tremble, for MORRISSEY has just added a room, 70 by 40 feet, to his old accommodations, at an expense of seventy thousand dollars. While certainly proves that he has little faith in the prophesied danger. It is evident, however, that his feeling is not shared by the constables, who wait to and fro before the massive building, where fortunes are reported to change hands in the rapid transit of an hour.

In the upper circles of Saratoga this opposition to the club-house is not bitter, but as MORRISSEY has ruled that only strangers are made welcome under his roof, the local feeling is against him. The desire to be ruined, however, seems to so pervade the popular mind, that women and men will take their chances, and protest in great bitterness at any curtailing of their privileges in that direction. Last year the Young Men's Christian Association took the matter in hand, but the story goes that when they called upon MORRISSEY, that gentleman quietly said, "You have the power to close my doors, but if you do I shall remove the race-course, and then what will become of your town?" and they being owners of real estate hesitated, and retreated from the presence of the chief, and eased their minds by a ferocious raid upon the smaller knights of the green cloth. It is fair to say that the members of the Association deny this story, and claim it to be a weak invention of the gamblers. This year Mr. MORRISSEY has taken out a hotel license, and proposes to keep a house of public accommodation, selecting his guests, however, thus rendering himself liable under our laws, which, while giving a man the right to keep a hotel, obliges him to furnish his accommodations to those who ask and who stand ready to pay. This hotel license is looked upon as settling the matter, but it gives greater publicity to the house, and if the authorities are very anxious to make a raid upon the club-house, they can easily do it under the complications that will arise under the new system. The bugbear that seems to haunt the minds of the people, and which they put forward as the reason for their opposition, is that in the magnificent new room that has just been completed, and which is pronounced the finest of its kind in the world, ladies are to be provided with facilities to gamble. This is unqualifiedly denied by Mr. MORRISSEY, who says that neither for inspection or use shall his doors be opened to the fair sex in the future.

There can be no question that in the quiet rooms of the large hotels the heavyless play prevails, and that to one man crippled in the club-house, a dozen lame ducks limp unnoticed along the corridors. It seems to be generally conceded that the bulk of the money that finds its way to Saratoga comes with the men who are attracted by the races and by the superb accommodations offered by MORRISSEY. But spasmodic morality is a feature of the times, and it will probably in this case die out, and the people, having done enough to satisfy their consciences, will swallow their defeat with their profits, and forget that they were ever aroused to action.

GENERAL MATTERS.

The race-track is in good condition, and the horses are expected to commence arriving at once. At the head-quarters of the sporting interest, Mr. JOHN GARDNER'S, the talk already has a horsey flavor, and yesterday the book of pools sold last year was canvassed and discussed with renewed interest. The arrangements are so perfected that even the reputation for order that the Saratoga races now enjoy will be this year increased. The ball-room of the Grand Union still retains its character, and, since it is proposed to hold State Conventions in future at Saratoga, it is understood that the proposition to put the ball up into lodging-rooms is finally abandoned. Improvements are going on in every direction. Capt. BURGESS, the efficient agent of the Congress Spring Company, has placed the Park in splendid order. The stores under the Grand Union are being rapidly fitted up, and several have already opened. Mr. ROBERTS, whose house was last year so popular with New-Yorkers, has nearly closed a bargain with Mr. MICHAEL for his house, which he purposes to tear down, making place for a large club-house, that shall contain some 900 rooms, exclusively for gentlemen.

It may be of interest to some people to know that there are numerous private boarding-houses at Saratoga, beautifully situated and admirably kept, where board can be obtained from $12 to $15 per week. They are close by the hotels, and as every street is lined with beautiful trees, they have every accommodation of shade and quiet. The parlors of the Grand Union are not exclusively for guests, the proprietors being pleased to have all enjoy the beautiful rooms, so that no one need stay away from this retreat because of the $5 per day that is generally associated with its attractions.

ILLINOIS.

The Sunday Liquor Law in Chicago—Great Excitement Among the Germans—Legislative Affairs—Small-Pox—Canal Improvements—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, June 13, 1871.

We are having some excitement and considerable discussion here just now concerning the Sunday liquor traffic. A day or two after the great Peace demonstration, our Common Council repealed the ordinance making it illegal to keep saloons open on Sunday, but such was the indignation of every decent citizen that at the next meeting the vote was reconsidered—20 to 12—and the old ordinance restored. This aroused the ire of the Teutons, and they took to holding indignation meetings, and passing all sorts of resolutions about "liberty," "right," "oppression," "temperance fanatics," "Puritans," &c., &c. And the German papers have taken upon the subject, and are discussing it from a lager-beer infidel standpoint. And the English papers have taken it up, and are discussing it, the religious papers from a religious standpoint, the daily papers, some from the standpoint of good citizenship, others from the standpoint of "how shall we manage things so as not to alienate the German vote." So we go, and between the whole no little excitement has been set afloat.

OUR LEGISLATURE.

The great object of calling the Legislature together in extra session, has been accomplished. The appropriation for the State-house—$600,000—has been made, and the most important of our Park bills has passed. And so the contract between the representatives of our park land speculators and the Springfield people has been carried out; this appropriation of "six hundred thousand more," undoubtedly settles the capital question, as it was expected by both parties to the controversy that it would, and was consequently regarded as a test question. The attempt to obtain a submission to the people was decided adversely by a larger majority than the appropriation was carried. The Penitentiary bill is the only measure now before the Legislature over which there will be any considerable controversy. The old "ring" which is mainly composed of leading Democrats, have been able for the last twenty years so to control the action of their co-partisans in the Legislature as to secure their votes in their interest, and so any measure passed in relation to the Penitentiary, in which these interests are involved, always produces a party division. But, as under the present management, a great and favorable change has taken place, and the institution put upon a paying basis, it is not probable that the attempt to introduce any new order of things will be successful. The old "Ring" swindled the State out of not much less than half a million dollars in the construction of the Penitentiary, the estimated cost being $400,000, and the actual about $1,200,000, therefore it is not probable that they will soon be intrusted with the management of its financial affairs again very soon.

SMALL-POX.

There is considerable small-pox in this city just now, more than people are generally aware of, and more than the Board of Health chooses to let the public know. It is constantly being brought here by emigrants, and the infection is scattered in various parts of the city. I heard one of our first physicians predicting the other day a terrible epidemic from it, such as has scourged cities of the Old World, and such as has prevailed to a lesser extent recently in New-York and Brooklyn. I do not know what he bases his fears upon, except that the disease is being daily introduced here by the emigrants, for our Board of Health and our physicians have always been very successful in controlling it, and in preventing its spreading.

AMONG THE ROCKS.

I took a trip a few days since down the Illinois and Michigan Canal as far as Lockport, a distance of about forty miles, through the section which has been enlarged and deepened by the City of Chicago. All along the banks, and for some distance "inland," it looked as though chaos had come again. Huge piles of rocks and stones, torn from the place where they grew, or were deposited, greeted us from one end of the route to the other, bearing testimony to the amount of work which has been done.

The work was undertaken by the city about three years ago, with a view of securing the clearing out of Chicago River, by creating a current through it from Lake Michigan southward. The highest point or divide, as it is called, is at Lockport, about forty miles west or south of the city. Here the canal is filled by a series of locks, up to the level of this lake, to the Erie Canal is at Lockport, N. Y. By cutting the bottom of the canal down about twenty feet this would be overcome, and the waters of Chicago River and Lake Michigan be made to run southward into the Illinois, and eventually into the Mississippi. The excavation has been largely through solid rock, and will cost the city between three and four million dollars. The work can only be done during the suspension of navigation, and hence it requires about four years to complete it. It was intended to have it done before the opening of navigation last Spring, but for some reason it was delayed. The improvement will be a valuable one in a sanitary point of view, as Chicago River, receiving a large portion of the sewage of the city, and being considerably deeper inland than near the Lake, is always in a most shocking and disease-producing condition. There have been objections raised against passing the foul waters of Chicago River into the streams below us; but when once a free flow is established from Lake Michigan, the people along the route will fail to perceive any injurious results. In fact, I am quite sure it will improve their streams by giving a new impetus to their sluggish currents.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The high life crim. con. scandal, an account of which I wrote you last week, has been hushed up. The husband did not shoot the aggressor, but, in the most quiet manner possible, sent his erring wife back to her parents in Boston, where she formerly moved in fashionable circles.... The Foundling Hospital, established here a few months ago, appears to be in a flourishing condition. It is one of those institutions which every where, apparently, increases the necessity of its existence, and favors the increase of foundlings. Such hospitals are of more than doubtful utility. The experience of the Old World cities is decidedly against their introduction into this country.... We have had three more additions to the fifteen who are now in jail charged with murder, since my last. It is not a pleasant fact to contemplate, but it is nothing more than we can expect as one result of licensing twenty-three hundred saloons.... Several of our "prominent citizens" are in training for the Mayoralty. It is not, with us, so much of an object to be a "City Father" as it was before the new constitution made stealing more hazardous.... There was a sort of Indian powwow at Farwell Hall on Friday evening. There happening to be some red men in town, some of our "distinguished" fellow-citizens thought it a good time to show off and get their names into the papers. What other object there was in the meeting it is noticeable to discover.... The crop reports still continue good, barring what relates to locusts and potato bugs.... The St. Jo. strawberry season is in full blast, and we are reveling in the most delicious fruit at a dime per box.... Business is good, money plenty, and real estate active.

NARRAGANSET PARK.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Wednesday, June 14, 1871.

Yesterday proved a fine day, and the Narragansett Park meeting was a great success. The favorites for the races were Heatherbloom and H. W. Genet, the latter suddenly taking the place of Nonesuch just before the start for the first. In the first heat there were six horses in the field, as follows: Heatherbloom, Charles Dickens, Baston Boy, Bridget, Andy Johnson and Dunderbery. The favorite had the pole and she got off well, with Baston Boy close on her wheel, and it was immediately apparant that the race was between those two. The mare never broke and the horse only broke slightly on the first quarter and then badly on the homestretch. The time was not pressed, which allowed commissioners to closely observe the action of this new man on the trot. During the heat, Heatherbloom manifested perfect steadiness, and trotted with the same steady, even stride as Lady Thorn. The field were no where, Andy Johnson, Dunderbery and Charles Dickens distanced. Time—3:17½, 1:13½, 2:32. In the second heat, Heatherbloom, Baston Boy and Bridget got off without loss of time, and almost in the air. The gray horse broke on the off-stretch. Bridget passed him, overtook Heatherbloom, and pressed her for some strides so that the gray mare broke, allowing Bridget to get ahead about three lengths, which she held until they turned into the homestretch. Then the gray mare left Bridget out of time, Bridget and won in splendid style, with perfect ease. Baston Boy broke badly on the homestretch, yet not losing time. The trio came in close together. Time—3:7½, 1:17½, 2:37½. The third heat decided the trot for the $1,000 purse, and was one of the most interesting ever trotted on the Narragansett Park track. The horses got off well together, Heatherbloom half a length ahead of Bridget, and Baston Boy close on the wheel of the bay mare. Heatherbloom broke on the the first quarter, when Bridget passed her, and, making all speed, drew several lengths ahead. The gray mare seeing her rival creeping away stretched herself to her full speed, and in a few seconds her head was on the bay mare's flank, then an inch in advance, then a length, and almost in a flash the bay mare was far behind, and the lovely gray turned down the homestretch trotting squarely and well, within her power. Heatherbloom passed under the line several lengths ahead, an easy victor. Baston Boy took second money. Time—40, 1:19, 2:36¾.

There were nine entries for the second race; six horses came to the pole placed as follows: Major Allen, Nonesuch, H. White, H. W. Genet, Colonel Lakeman, Belle Strickland. The lot got off after several false starts at close order. Belle Strickland leading, Ed. White second. On the first quarter H. W. Genet came to the front and held his place, pressed within a length and a half by Ed. White, again closely followed by Nonesuch, the field well up. Belle Strickland trotted steadily in this heat, and pleased her friends, but as it was known to be a tight thing between the competitors, much money was not put on the field, so the chief part of the financial loss was sustained by the backers of Nonesuch. Time—37, 1:18, 2:39½. In the second heat the same horses started out. There was much trouble to get the horses off, and when the start was effected H. W. Genet was leading, Nonesuch second, and the field in a cluster. From the first the struggle was between the first and the bay mare, they had it all to themselves on the turn into the off-stretch; the rivals came neck and neck and never evinced a wish to break; thus they flew along till at the last moment the bay stallion struggled a pace forward and passed under the line closely waited on by the chestnut mare. The field meanwhile strung out and arrived one after another, Colonel Lakeman and Major Allen being distanced. Time—37¼, 1:11, 2:36¾. At the third heat, owing to the decision of the judges, only four horses came to the pole: H. W. Genet, Nonesuch, Ed. White, Belle Strickland. Here again there was considerable scoring and many false starts, finally coming in a good order. H. W. Genet leading, the mare in front for safety. Ed. White second, Nonesuch third, Belle Strickland fourth. The bay stallion, though closely followed, was all through an almost certain winner, with Nonesuch a good second. Time—36½, 1:11¼, 2:35½.

The attendance yesterday was about 5,000 persons, consisting in the main of those personally interested in the horses, or else members of the Association. Few ladies were present, and these remained in their own carriages, thereby detracting from the gayety of the scene. The first race for to-day is a purse of $1,400, for horses that never trotted better than 2:29; first, $1,200; second, $120; third, $200. Seven entries: Thomas Jefferson, prime favorite, indeed so high in public opinion that the pools sold at the Lafayette Hall, by Messrs. MARSHALL & BAKER, closed him out, and the following horses were sold: Royal John, $100; Prince, $25. Then a slight discussion of public feeling: Royal John, $95; Prince, $35. The field varied from $20 to $20. Betting is brisk, and a good deal of money must change hands.

In the early part of last night we had heavy rains, but the sun shines brilliantly again, and there is no fear but that the track will be dry, probably dusty.

The first race was won by R. TOBEY'S s. m. Susie beating DANIEL PFIFER'S ch. g. Lottery second, and E. C. WHITE'S c. g. Jack Draper third. Time—2:36, 2:37¾, 2:34½, 2:34½. The second race was won in three straight heats by J. J. BOWEN'S g. g. Royal John, beating O. A. HARROD'S s. m. Kelso second, and THOMAS S. GARDNER'S blk. g. Thomas Jefferson third. Time—2:31½, 2:33½, 2:34¾.

The Weather Reports—Fulfillment of a Storm Prediction.

From the Galveston (Texas) Bulletin, June 7.

On Thursday last, at noon, the telegram sent from Washington, D. C., gave the following statement:

"It is probable that partially cloudy and pleasant weather will be experienced on Friday, from Missouri to Virginia and northward. It is probable that fair and high winds will prevail on the Gulf coast of Florida, during the night."

The dispatch sent the next day said:

"It is probable the high winds on the Gulf will advance, wherever, to the coast of Louisiana."

The New-Orleans papers tell us that the prediction is a disastrous reality; that the most easterly wind has been very violent and damaging. How well the prediction has been met at this city, we too well know. The fulfillment of these prophetic statements shows the vast importance of heeding the street warnings of these important barometrical reports. Take one warning, and its certain fulfillment, should not be forgotten in the future.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

City Superintendent's Report—The Annual Outdoor Exhibition—Appropriations for the Year—The Vacation Question—Normal—Grammar School No. 31.

The Department of Public Instruction met at 4 P. M. yesterday, Mr. SMITH in the Chair.

The following report of the City Superintendent was received:

I have the honor to submit the following report for the month ending May 31, 1871:

The number of schools visited by the undersigned for examination and inspection was as follows: The several departments of Grammar Schools Nos. 3, 11, 17, 21, 23, 25, 29, 37, 40, 41, 43, 44, 69; Primary Schools Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 14, 21, 40; the primary department of Grammar School No. 75, and colored school No. 6. The accommodations in Allen-street, provided for the last-mentioned school by a recent action of Board, are much superior to those previously occupied by it, and the attendance of pupils at the school has somewhat increased. There is no doubt that it will receive still further support during the month's examination now held by the Assistant Superintendents in the following schools, viz.: Grammar Schools Nos. 2, 9, 13, 15, 17, 23, 25, 29, 35, 36, 37, 41, 47, 51, 55, and Primary Schools Nos. 2, 3, 4, 17, 21, 22, 23 and 41, making in all 34 departments or schools. In these schools 4,284 classes have been examined and minutely examined in their respective grades; and in 149 the instruction was found to be excellent; in 148 good; in 28 fair, and in five (5) indifferent; the number, therefore, of the latter little above two per cent. The discipline of all of these schools appeared to be excellent; of 3 it was only fair; or indifferent. The general management of the schools of the several wards will be manifest. The aggregate monthly returns made by the principals of the several schools show that during the month of May the average attendance of pupils was 54,550. This average is larger than that of any corresponding month in 1870, and 350 in excess of the average attendance for the month of April last. The number of members during the month of May in attendance was 57,000, which is 1,000 more than in any month of these schools during the corresponding month last year, and 500 in excess of the number reported for the preceding month. This constant advance of pupils is a matter of great encouragement to the schools, and very considerably reinforces with their efficiency and progress.

A communication was received from the School Trustees of the Seventh Ward, protesting against the discontinuance of the male department of Grammar School No. 31, and calling attention to the increase of inhabitants in the ward.

It was temporarily laid over, and subsequently the report of the Committee on Teachers was called up, recommending the discontinuance of the male department of Grammar School No. 31 after the 1st of July, and directing the transference of the pupils to School No. 15.

Mr. SMITH protested strongly against the proposed action of the Committee.

Mr. GRAHAM showed that even when the contest was in both places, the schools existing in this ward would still have quite a small attendance.

Mr. SAXTON spoke in favor of the report, and said that the proposed consolidation would have to be followed by others.

The report was laid over.

A communication was received from the Controller, giving the appropriations made by the Board of Apportionment for the current year as follows:

College of the City of New-York	$117,176 66
In which is included for salaries,	$110,200 00
College of the City of New-York, erecting
[illegible] building	[illegible]
Public Instruction	3,491,250 00
In which is included $1,400,000 for salaries.
Total	$3,676,426 66

The Committee on Normal College reported a resolution fixing the salaries at $1,400, and $2 each for the conveyance of each colleger, as follows:

Mason work, O. H. Tucker & Son	$163,197
Carpenter work, J. O'Connor	22,000
Granite, Jas. Hogan	12,000
Furniture, stoves, Sinnicks & Milne	30,000
Total	$276,197

The report was adopted.

The Committee on By-laws presented a report on the resolution of Mr. WOOD, extending the summer vacation from the 1st of July to the 15th of September. The Committee state that during the past fifteen years the term of the vacation has been extended from three to seven weeks, that the subject of extending it still further has been frequently discussed, but that the Committee are of opinion that it is inexpedient to make the change. The Committee call attention to the fact that parents of such children as desire to give them a longer vacation than that allowed by the school laws can do so.

Mr. WOOD referred to the statistics of school attendance during April and July, (already published,) and said that though it was quite true that the children could go away when they pleased, the teachers could not. It was for them, the female teachers particularly, he urged the passage of the resolution. As much could be done, in the way of education, in forty-five weeks as in forty-seven, and it was cruel to keep very young children in school during the extreme hot weather.

The report was adopted.

A resolution was presented by Mr. LAWS, directing that after the 1st of July, save until further notice, no room rooms be dispensed with and the schools closed at 12 P. M.

The resolution was adopted and the Board adjourned.

The Erie Litigation—Progress of the Suit of Heath and Raphael Against Fisk and Gould.

Yesterday afternoon the case of HEATH and RAPHAEL, English stockholders of the Erie Railroad Company, against JAMES FISK, Jr., JAY GOULD, and the other Directors of the Company, involving the right to some 80,000 shares of Erie stock, was resumed before KENNETH G. WHITE, Master in Equity. Mr. WILLARD, of the firm of WILLARD, MARTIN & BACH, who was subpœned, was excused from testifying on account of illness, after a very animated discussion.

WILLIAM A. HEATH testified: In December and February last I was a member of the firm of WILLIAM HEATH & Co.

Q.—Is reported during this examination that on December 31, 1870, there were 4,000 shares of Erie stock issued to your firm and that on the first of December, 1870, there were issued 40,000 shares; is it so?

A.—On the 12th of January, 1871, 5,000 shared more were issued to that firm. How under what circumstances I am not in a position to say. There were about 11,000 shares in March? A.—I don't know anything about it; no one said anything to me on the subject. Any one could issue the stock in my name, but it does not follow that I myself signed it. I gave my wife a Power of Attorney. I gave a Power of Attorney under which they could put this stock was sold, but I could not identify the stock now; I don't know that the stock still remains in my name; I don't know of any stock that was issued in December or January last by JAY GOULD; I never sold that Gould 11,000 shares were entered in my name; I have issued a great many certificates of stock; I don't know that I could identify it now; I don't know that I signed any transfers at the request of Mr. GOULD; I can't recollect any stock made by Mr. GOULD to me about this stock, or any stock made by him to me that he had put it in my name; I first learned of the transaction from the newspapers.

Q.—Have you not heard of 30,000 shares of Erie stock being issued in your name? A.—I never knew the fact, to the best of my knowledge and belief; the custom in Broad-street is to put stock in the names of brokers, for the purpose of having them entered at the office; the certificates are signed by the owners; I have been in the habit of doing business in that way for Mr. GOULD and other parties. I know nothing whatever about the Erie stock in question.

The investigation was then adjourned until 1 o'clock today.

Departure for Europe of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Yesterday afternoon Judge RICHARDSON, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, left for Europe, accompanied by his family and a safe containing several million dollars' worth of bonds of the new loan which, however, are worthless until his signature is appended, which will not be done until the bonds are delivered to the applicants in Europe. The revenue cutter Dexter, about 12½ o'clock, having on board Judge RICHARDSON and family and a select company of invited guests, left her moorings, and after running a short distance down the bay, returned to the dock of the Jays, and delivered Judge RICHARDSON safely on board the steamer. The gentlemen who assisted in this farewell entertainment were Gov. H. D. Cooke, of the District of Columbia; Gen. Hillhouse, Assistant Treasurer of the United States; Collector Murphy, Naval Officer Collin, Deputy Collector Jas. Berwilliger, Surveyor A. B. Cornell, Gov. Morgan, C. C. Norwell, Gov. Bullock of Georgia, Col. P. E. Howe, Messrs. Henry Clews, Reuben Howes, H. B. Fry, J. T. Howe, Gail Arthur, and a number of others.

At the Court of General Sessions, before Recorder HACKETT, yesterday, HELEN MILLER, an expert thief, was tried on a charge of stealing two microscopic stands from the office of Dr. Wm. M. HOLE, at No. 24 West Twenty-ninth-street. She was sent to State Prison for five years. WM. HOGEMAN was sentenced to State Prison for two years and six months for burglary. WM. DEMORIER, his accomplice, who was recently from State Prison, was sent back there for five years. PHILIP BROSNICK and JAMES FARLEY, guilty of robbing LOUIS KRAFT, were sent to State Prison for five years each. TERENCE BULLET and JOHN COFFEE, indicted for robbery, pleaded guilty to larceny from the person, and were remanded. The Court then adjourned.

Interesting Book Sale.

Our book-loving readers will thank us for reminding them of the sale, by auction, of a large and very interesting consignment of books, to take place this afternoon and to-morrow, at 4 o'clock P. M., at GEO. A. LEAVITT & Co's. rooms, Clinton Hall, Astor-place. It comprises an extraordinary assortment of fine illustrated books, theatrical classes, literary periodicals, history, works on art and science, &c., and in particular, a number of unique lots, hitherto unequaled in the history of New-York literary auctions. Among these may be named, a set of BOYDELL'S Shakespeare, in nine volumes, folio; a number of fine books on costumes; a full set from the beginning of the Art Journal, in thirty-one volumes; the original edition of EVERETT'S Shakespeare; LODGE'S Portraits, twelve volumes; FISHER'S illustrated Scripture History, &c. Pre-eminent among the whole, however, are the great unique "standard" set of GIBBON'S Geographical History of England, in twenty-one volumes, folio; the equally remarkable collection of the Thousand and One Nights, in six volumes, folio, and the set of six original drawings by CRUIKSHANK. It is safe to say that holders of these last three could be duplicated.

TRINITY IMPROVEMENTS.

A New Parish School-House and a New Iron Suspension Bridge—Expenditure of $112,000.

The Trinity Church Vestry has decided on increasing the value of its property down town, by the addition of a school-house to be built on Church-street, and up town by the erection of a suspension bridge across the Boulevard, near Carmansville, connecting the Cemetery between One Hundred and Fifty-third and One Hundred and Fifty-fifth streets. The whole will cost $112,000.

THE NEW BUILDING.

The Trinity Church School-house which is being erected according to the plans of Mr. UPJOHN, the architect, will be a middle-pointed Gothic, plain and substantial four-story and basement building, of Newark stone, 54 by 94, approached from Thames and Church streets, the principal entrance being on the latter. On the upper floors there will be one large room, open-timbered, for a Sunday-school and lecture hall, and on the other floors, through which will run large halls the whole length of the edifice, will be located all the parish and industrial schools, the offices for the clergy, practising-room for the organist, &c. Ample provision for the comfort of the children is to be made. The structure will be amply ventilated, and, it is hoped, will be completed by the beginning of next Winter, at a cost of $80,000.

THE SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

Where the Boulevard bisects Trinity Cemetery at Carmansville, it is proposed to connect the two parts into which it is thus divided by means of an iron suspension bridge, the foundation of which was laid on Tuesday afternoon, between One Hundred and Fifty-third and One Hundred and Fifty-fifth streets, by Messrs. VAUX, WITHERS & CO. Two piers of Ohio stone, and abutments, 25 by 8 in the base, will be erected on both side of the road. Over these will be constructed two massive towers, gothic, with columns 55 feet high, of bluerock-faced work, between which arcade arches will pass. From them the bridge, 177 feet long by 14 wide will be suspended by 2½-inch wire cable, and ¾-inch iron rods. The approaches to the structs east-iron front, with medallions of ilocrated device, and a bow with ornamental tiles in panels. The work, according to the terms of the contract, will be completed by the 1st of next December, at a cost of $42,000.

THE HORSE DISEASE.

No Abatement in the Malady—It Baffles Professional Skill—Its Ravages Yesterday.

The very remarkable malady which has recently made its appearance among the horses of the street-railway companies, and the large livery and sale stables, still continues its ravages, without the slightest sign of abatement. It still baffles the most eminent and experienced veterinary surgical skill in the City, notwithstanding the cases have had the most unremitted attention. Yesterday, a dissection of an animal recently deceased, belonging to the Third-avenue line, was made, and a careful examination and analysis of the contents of the stomach elicited nothing by which the origin of the disease could be traced. The food of the animals, the corn, oats, and even the salt have all been minutely analyzed, but the investigation resulted in no important disclosures. Several new remedies were tried yesterday, but so far have proved ineffectual in even mitigating the disease. The veterinary surgeons make the very equivocal statement that they do not understand exactly the real nature of the disease, but add that it is not contagious. From very authentic sources, it appears that up to last evening the horse plague has attacked between seven and eight hundred horses, most of which were the property of the street railway companies, and of those seized with the disease, over one hundred per cent. have already resulted fatally. Of course, some of the cases have been cured, but a thorough cure has indeed, it seems, been a rare occurrence. The Third-avenue line is said to have nearly 500 horses down with the disorder, doubtless the majority of which will either die or become utterly worthless in the future. They lost twenty horses on Tuesday night, and a number on yesterday. Their line, with its 3,000 horses. It is said, has already suffered so severely as to compel them to withdraw several extra afternoon cars from the road. The Second-avenue shows by no means any more gratifying exhibit. As already stated, it was among the horses of this line that the disease originated, and since its appearance they have averaged over 100 on the sick list, with comparatively few cures. The other lines, both on the west side of Broadway and those across town, have all suffered proportionately. It is also said that the only companies that have been fortunate in not yet having the dread disease to make its appearance in their stables are the Fourth and Tenth avenue and Bleecker-street lines.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The attendance at the Exchange yesterday (June 14) was very good throughout the day, and business was transacted as follows:

JOSEPH MCGUIRE, by order of the Supreme Court in partition, under the direction of GRATZ NATHAN, Esq., referee, sold a gore lot, with small frame building thereon, on the north side of East Forty-second-street, 73 feet 6 inches west of Third-avenue, for $7,500; purchased by FRANCIS TOMES. The lot has a front on the street of 51 feet 6 inches, with a depth on the westerly side of 31 feet 9 inches, therefore controlling, as it does, the loss in the rear. Aside from its location, being near the large railway depot just erected, it is a valuable piece of property, and the price paid for it was low. The legal sale under the direction of D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., Esq., referee, of a house and lot on the west side of Fourth-avenue, about 22 feet north of Eighty-fifth-street, was adjourned by the auctioneer affecting the above sale until July 26.

MULLER, WILKINS & CO., by order of the executors of EDWARD B. DUNBAR, deceased, disposed of a country-seat located at Edgewater, Staten Island, embracing a large two-story frame house, with extension, together with four and a half acres of land. The property is handsomely situated on the west side of Howard-avenue, on high ground and in the midst of first-class improvements. It was purchased by Mr. WM. B. DUNCAN, the owner of land surrounding it on three sides, for $19,500—not a high figure.

JAMES H. MILLER, by order of trustees, offered for sale two lots, each 20.7 by 100, on the west side of Fourth-avenue, 81 feet south of Eighty-first-street, and for the lots bids to the amount of $5,675 each were made, but the property was not sold, and no further business was transacted. Particulars in reference to the Rutherford Park sale, conducted, yesterday, by A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BRO., will be given tomorrow, and also the details, if received, of the suburban sales held respectively by JAMES A. FISHER at Jamaica, Long Island, and by E. A. LAWRENCE at Flushing.

The result of the suburban auction, on Tuesday, at which some 300 lots, located on the line of Erie Railway, near Rutherfurd Park, N. J., were advertised to be sold by JOHNSON & MILLER, was rather a singular one, as, after several lots had been disposed of, one of the owners of the property peremptorily terminated the sale, alleging that the prices received were unsatisfactory. The attendance of buyers was large, and at the opening of the sale the best of feeling was manifested, bidding being active, and the prices obtained for the lots sold considered good by those conversant with the value of land in this locality. Besides, it is understood that the owner some three weeks since offered the property at private sale at a much lower rate per foot than it would have received on Tuesday, had he allowed the auction to continue. Under the terms of the agreement entered into with the auctioneers in charge of the sale, by the parties interested in the lots, they certainly expected that they would be able to conduct the sale in a satisfactory manner. They were, however, interfered with, and hence the result, as to which, while absolving the auctioneers from blame, considerable public disapprobation was manifested. It is to be regretted that the auction was so abruptly stopped, for from indications it is probable that had it continued the transaction would have been attended with success. In all eleven lots were sold as the figures noted in the recapitulation below. The purchasers were as follows: John Gillespie, Patrick Burke and E. W. Jones, of this City; G. W. Field, of Williamsburg; Thomas Hill, of Jersey City, and L. H. Couren, of Passaic, N. J.

Today, at the Exchange, MULLER, WILKINS & CO., at a Supreme Court sale, will dispose of a very valuable plot of ground, comprising some thirteen city lots, situate on the south side of One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street, with fronts on both Ninth and St. Nicholas avenues. E. H. LUDLOW & CO., at public auction, will offer for sale the desirable plot of ground, 50 by 100, with the church buildings, located on the south-west corner of Lexington-avenue and Forty-sixth-street, known as the Lexington-avenue Presbyterian Church; and JOSEPH MCGUIRE, at two several Supreme Court sales, will offer City real estate on Fifty-fifth and Forty-second streets respectively. In addition, JOHNSTON & VAN TASSELL advertise for sale at the Exchange, today, a house and lot on East Fourth-street, between Second and Third-avenues.

In Brooklyn, today, at the Commercial Exchange, Fulton-street, by order of the Supreme Court in partition, J. COLE will dispose of an extensive line of Williamsburg improved real estate, while at No. 370 Fulton-street, COLE & MURPHY will offer at auction 200 Brooklyn lots, sold by order of the Supervisors of Kings County.

In the matter of suburban auctions to take place today, that at Flatbush, Long Island, under the direction of JOHNSON & MILLER, should command attention. In all 116 lots will be offered, desirably located, and at prices to suit purchasers. Sale at 2 P. M. JAMES A. PLUMEY also, today, conducts an important auction at Jamaica, Long Island, involving the sale of forty-four building lots, situate at the junction of Fulton and Van Wyck avenues, in the village named. Sale at 2½ P. M. ALDRIDGE & WOOD will offer for sale two handsome French-roof dwellings, a well-built cottage and forty desirable building-lots, all in the immediate vicinity of the St. James Hotel. From the above notices it will be seen that the business prospect for Real Estate is of special interest. The sale of lots at Hudson City, N. J., by ALDRIDGE & WOOD, noticed for Monday last, was postponed on that day, owing to the inclemency of the weather, until Monday next.

Attention is again called to the enterprise, as presented through our business columns, of the Ocean View Improvement Co. of Staten Island. The lots to be sold are not only in themselves intrinsically valuable, but other inducements are held out which are at the same time attractive and likely to be of profit to the investor. Should the scheme not meet with success which is unlikely, purchasers of lots will be refunded their investment with interest.

At private sale several recent large transactions of importance are reported. ISAAC HONIG, No. 26 Pine-street, on Tuesday sold the block of lots bounded by New-avenue, the Seventh-avenue Boulevard, One Hundred and Twentieth and One Hundred and Twenty-first streets, for $170,000. W. K. STEVENSON & SON, No. 11 Pine-street, sold on Monday one full lot on the south side of Sixty-fifth-street, 160 feet west of Eighth-avenue, for $13,500. And yesterday, on the street, the sale of the following property was currently reported: Eight lots on the east side of Fifth-avenue, between Eighty-eighth and Eighty-ninth streets, (block front,) with two lots in rear, one fronting on each street named—ten lots in all—sold in one parcel for $300,000.

THE ARCTIC EXPLORERS.

Arrival of the Polaris at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard.

Capt. Hall's Plans—Personnel of the Expedition—Hannah and Joe—The Polaris to Remain in the Harbor Ten Days.

One can imagine nothing in nature so indescribably beautiful, so superbly dazzling in its brilliancy as the effects produced by the lustrous rays of the midday sun upon the immense mountains of snow and ice which meet the eye on all sides in the Arctic regions. All description fails to do justice to this glittering scene of unparalleled splendor. Viewing it, you stand mute with rapturous awe and astonishment while you gaze upon an unrivaled and brilliant picture, compared with which the richest and most gorgeous paintings of the fabulous magnificence of Eastern grandeur, so graphically portrayed in the tales of the Arabian Nights, are miserable counterfeits. In the harbor of New-York is the little steam vessel which arrived here yesterday from Washington, the Polaris, with a company of adventurous spirits on board, about to visit this glacial scene of beauty, with a far different object than that of gratifying their æsthetic tastes. They go in the cause of science to solve the mystery of the North-west Passage, which for nearly three centuries has been the goal of many bold navigators and eminent scientists, and a source from which many of them have never returned.

The expedition, upon leaving New-York, will steer direct for St. Johns, N. F., where it will remain for a few days only, in order to procure a few dogs and stores necessary for Arctic navigation, which are more easily obtained at that port than elsewhere. From St. Johns the Polaris will shape her course for Davis' Straits and the Danish settlement of Disco, on the west coast of Greenland, and possibly touch at Holsteinborg. At Disco will be established the first and main rendezvous of the expedition, where it can resort for supplies if needed, instead of coming nearer home. The store-ship Supply, upon returning from Europe, will follow the Polaris with extra provisions and additional material necessary for the expedition, which will be landed at Disco some time in August. At Upernavik or Tissonack, the most northern settlement of Greenland, Capt. HALL will obtain his gangs of dogs, so valuable to Arctic explorers. Leaving Disco, the Polaris will steam across Baffin's Bay into Jones' Sound, in latitude 76° north, and after sailing about 300 miles, will strike northward. It is possible the Polaris will be compelled to Winter in Jones' Sound, but her commander hopes to get his vessel into Winter quarters much higher north, probably in latitude 82° north or thereabout. In the beginning of April, 1872, he will commence his sledge journey, and hastily push from 600 to 800 over the hummock ice toward the Pole. HALL asserts, that if Ellesmere Land which reaches from Jones' Sound northward, extends upward to the Pole, he is confident of reaching the exact object of his destination in at least 100 days from the time he leaves the ship with his sledge party. This is the utmost endurance and ice determinate in an open Polar sea, his boats will be used on that as yet mythical sheet of water to complete his discoveries, precisely in the same manner as they will be employed in transporting the party from one life to the other of whales among the field ice. A full description of the Polaris has already appeared in these columns, it is needless to recapitulate.

Capt. HALL, the commander of the expedition, is about five feet eight inches hight, with a firmly-knit, compact frame, indicative of great vigor and strength. His head is large, with a prominent forehead, dark hair, and heavy brown beard, inclining to curl. His forehead is broad and massive, and appears to indicate a degree of taste and intelligence which his friends, it is said, do not claim for him. His eyes are blue, and his expression of his countenance firm, but pleasant. Capt. HALL is neither a navigator or a scientific man, in the most remote sense. He is from Cincinnati, where he was formerly engaged in publishing the Occasional, and afterward the Daily Penny Press. In 1860, after having read a great deal on the subject of Arctic discoveries, HALL became a perfect enthusiast in the matter. He communicated his views to his friends, and in 1860 sailed in a whale-ship from New-London, for the purpose of being set ashore in search of the remains of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN. Since then his name has been so repeatedly before the public that it would be needless to recapitulate his several expeditions. The chief of the scientific corps attached to the expedition is Dr. EMIL BESSELS, who was a member of the German Frozen Sea expedition to the North Pole. He is a young man with a high reputation as a scientific student, and is a graduate of the famous University of Heidelberg. Dr. BESSELS is of very slight figure, with a large, intellectual head, heavy dark beard and hair, black, penetrating eyes, and regularly-featured face.

Besides Capt. HALL and Dr. BESSELS, quite prominent characters, are the sailing-master, Capt. C. S. BUDDINGTON, who has had thirty-two years experience as an Arctic navigator, Mr. EBENEZER C. CHESTER, of Noank, Conn., the first officer, and Mr. WILLIAM MORTON, who is said to have deserved the open Polar sea, while on the first Grinnell Expedition, who goes out as the second officer. Sergt. MEYER, of the United States Signal Corps, has charge of the meteorological department. EMIL SCHUMAN is the chief engineer, and JOHN WILSON his assistant. There is one cook, one steward, one blacksmith, one gunner, five seamen and four firemen.

Two of the most interesting individuals who accompany the expedition, are the Esquimaux man and woman, who have been with Capt. HALL since his first essay in Arctic explorations. The man has assumed the civilized title of Joe, but claims in the more euphonious esquimo dialect to be the original of the "Moonlight" of the Innuits around Repulse Bay. There is no distinctive feature to mark him from the rest of his race. He is the same squinid, dwarfed and stunted creature that they all are, with long straight black hair, murky-looking, unintelligent eyes, and repulsive countenance. A tête-à-tête with his Esquimo would not impress one with the reality of his conversation. His ideas are anything but princely, and amid his native snows never soar above a first-class feed of blubber. Neither does his address manifest that degree of confidence which the consciousness of superiority always confers, even as seen in the lofty bearing and extreme haughtiness of an ignorant, savage, petty Comanche chief on the plains of Mexico. Joe is an admirable seal-hunter and a good dog-team driver; both combined form the ne plus ultra of Esquimaux accomplishments. HANNAH, the tailoress, or Esquimaux, as she is called in the Innuit tongue, is remarkably ugly, and as particularly dexterous with the needle. She is, in many respects, far superior to her husband Joe and has infinitely more intelligence though she does not bear the slightest mark of intellect upon her face. Her features, like those of all the female portion of her race, are by no means attractive, and to a few years will be perfectly hideous. Really Meg Merrilies with her tawny, shriveled and fiendish countenance distorted by the most violent passion, would be a perfect Hebe to most of the Esquimaux sqauws.

HANNAH is rather confused in her ideas of the celestial regions. In answer to an interrogatory on the subject, she spoke of the same savage elysium—the happy hunting ground—which has universal credence among the aborigines of the United States. The infernal regions was pictured as a place not of everlasting fire, but as abode down, ever so far beneath the surface of the earth, where the cold was very great, almost insufferable, and where vermin, in myriads upon myriads, preyed upon the unlucky damned of the Esquimaux. It is said that, as far as the vermin are concerned, their foe-lists on earth are about as near an approach to the torments of an Esquimaux hell as one could well conceive, and it is very much to be doubted whether, after a long life in his Arctic home, the hardened old Innuit sinner will ever be seriously annoyed with his creeping friends in the regions below.

The Polaris will remain in the harbor about ten days, it is said, in consequence of the inability of her commander to obtain a suitable astronomer willing to risk the perils of Arctic travel in the cause of science. In the meantime the little vessel will doubtless be freely visited, at her dock in the Brooklyn Navy Yard by the public, who have already heard so much of her. The scientific department of the expedition is under the supervision of the National Academy of Sciences, but Capt. HALL holds himself under the orders of the Navy Department.

The Crops in Illinois—Encouraging Reports.

From the Springfield (Ill.) Journal, June 12.

From a gentleman who has been traveling over the country, and has the most ample means of observation, we learn that the farmers' prospects are most encouraging. Winter wheat in Sangamon, Macoupin and Logan Counties is now being harvested, the reapers having commenced work on Wednesday last, and the yield is large and the grain excellent in quality. Corn is looking very fine, and many early fields are already "laid by." On one farm in Macoupin County, on Thursday last, our informant saw a reaper at work in a wheat-field and a corn-planter dropping corn in an adjoining field, and was informed that some fields

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The War on Nuisances—A New and Cruel Swindle—Movements and Mortality of Diseases.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Board of Health yesterday, President BOSWORTH was in the chair, and Commissioners CSCOARINI, GROSS, MANIERRE, MULLALY and H. SMITH were present. Upon reports presented by the attorney it was ordered that suits be commenced in four cases of violation of the Tenement-house law, thirty-one cases of non-compliance with the orders of the Board, and in several cases the orders for commencement of suits heretofore made were rescinded.

A complaint was received against J. L. BROWN, the Street-cleaning Contractor, for creating a nuisance at Ninety-first-street and East River by the dumping of manure, and a recommendation was received from the City Sanitary Inspector that the contractor be required to cover the offensive deposits with carbolated lime. The subject was referred to the Sanitary Committee. An order was issued requiring the American Fertilizing Company to remove all offensive things from their grounds at the foot of One Hundred and Sixteenth-street, East River.

A communication was read in which Dr. RUSSELL, Register of Records, states that a burial permit had been granted on a certificate of the death of CHARLES BENEDENT, alleged to have died in the Small-pox Hospital, Blackwell's Island, which was signed by HENRY S. HOYT, Assistant Medical Inspector. It was returned with information that BENEDENT was not dead, and that there was no medical officer named HENRY S. HOYT attached to the Hospital. It then appeared that the certificate was the work of an impostor, who had reported the death to the parents of BENEDENT, and demanded and was paid several dollars for the certificate of death. The matter was referred to the District-Attorney and the Board of Police.

Dr. MORRIS, City Sanitary Inspector, made the following comparative statement of the movements of contagious diseases during the past two weeks:

Week ending June 3: Typhus fever, 1; typhoid fever, 6; scarlet-fever, 63; small-pox, 50; measles, 29; diphtheria, 7.

Week ending June 10: Typhus fever, 5; typhoid fever, 7; scarlet fever, 54; small-pox, 76; measles, 25; diphtheria, 6.

Dr. RUSSELL, Register of Records, commenting upon the mortality of the week, said there were 469 registered deaths for the past week, being a decrease of 23 from the previous week, and an excess of 54 over the corresponding period of 1870. Zymotic diseases occasioned 123 deaths; constitutional, 101; local, 178; developmental, 28, and violent causes, 26. There were 19 fatal cases of small-pox, a decrease of 4, and 19 of scarlatina, a decrease of 3. Ten deaths were from measles, and 9 from typhoid fever, being an increase of 2 in each instance. Four deaths were ascribed to typhoid fever, against 3 in the preceding week. Diarrhœal affections produced 41 deaths in each of the past two weeks. One death, occurring on the 9th, was attributed to the sting of a fly, followed by a malignant pustule in the back, and soon afterward, in company with his brother, again meeting the officer, the latter seized him by the throat, tore his clothing, beat him with his club, and finally took him to the Station-house and made a complaint of assault and battery against him, on which he was locked up all night, and the next day fined $10 in the Tombs Police Court. The officer denied all the statements of the complainant, and claimed that the arrest was made because two girls complained they had been insulted by CORRIGAN and his brother. The case was referred to the Board.

Progress of Weston's Walk.

WESTON, having accomplished his extraordinary feat of 112 miles within twenty-four hours on Tuesday morning, started on the 101st mile of his 400 mile walk in five days at the Empire Rink at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning. His step was quick and strong, and he showed scarcely any signs of fatigue. He kept traversing the long circuit of the Rink building until he had added fifteen miles to his record, when he stopped, resuming his tramp after fifteen minutes' rest. His second start was made at 9:05½ A. M., and he did not stop until he accomplished another fifteen miles, the time being three hours and eighteen and one-half minutes. He sat down at 1:14 P. M. and rested about an hour, during which time he partook of a hearty meal. He completed his 201st mile at 3:33 P. M., and at 10:9 o'clock last evening the time table showed that he had made 221 miles altogether. He performed the first fifty miles of yesterday's walking in eleven hours and forty-five minutes. The Rink was thronged with spectators, who appeared deeply interested in the movements of the tireless pedestrian. WESTON expects to finish his 400 mile feat about 10 o'clock on Friday evening.

Shipments of Small Fruits from Delaware in May—A Large Increase Over Last Year.

From the Wilmington (Del.) Commercial, June 13.

The increased attention which is being paid to small fruits, &c., by the agriculturists of Delaware, Eastern Shore of Maryland and the neighboring country, is well shown by the following comparative statement of these articles, transported by the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, in May, 1870, and in May, 1871:

Number of Car-loads.	1870.	1871.	Increase.
Delaware Railroad to Jersey City	35	127	112
Delaware Railroad to Philadelphia	13	33	20
Baltimore Railroad to Philadelphia	64	81	42
Baltimore Railroad to Jersey City	31	74	43
Total	132	374	242

The tonnage of each car-load is 16,000 pounds and upward, making the total weight as follows:

	1870.	1871.	Increase.
Delaware R. R. to Jersey City	400,000	2,192,000	1,792,000
Delaware R. R. to Philadelphia	192,000	1,312,000	1,120,000
Baltimore to Philadelphia	1,024,000	1,728,000	577,000
Baltimore to Jersey City	496,000	1,824,000	688,000
Total in pounds	2,112,000	5,944,000	3,872,000
Total in tons	1,056	2,972	1,936

These cars were not entirely loaded with any one kind of fruit, but by far the greater number were loaded wholly with strawberries, and all nearly so. Calculating each quart of strawberries as two pounds, we have the equivalent of 1,056,000 quarts in MAY, 1870, and 2,972,000 quarts in May, 1871, being an increase, for this year, of 1,916,000 quarts, as compared with last year, and notwithstanding this great increase, we believe growers were never better remunerated for labor.
